Parks to decide list of upgrades for referendum

by JOE SWICKARD

Because Arlington Heights Park District commissioners have decided to include other park district improvements on the Oct. 2 referendum to finance the Nike Base golf course, they must decide how long the improvement list will be.

The park administration has drawn up a preliminary list of improvements totaling $1.3 million, including $158,000 in contingency funds. The list calls for the development of six sites already owned by the park district and improvements for existing parks.

The development costs almost equal the $1.5 million needed to develop the golf course, complete with clubhouse, special maintenance equipment and a year's operations budget.

THE PARK BOARD this week agreed to put the golf course funding and the park site improvements as two separate questions on the Oct. 2 referendum.

The parks development list includes the creation of new parks where now there are flood-control basins and vacant lots, the installation of swimming pool heaters and the lighting of baseball diamonds and tennis courts.

The development "shopping list" will be the subject at a special park board meeting Tuesday. Park officials hope the residents' reactions will help them package the two-part referendum so that both questions will be given voter approval.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at Olympic Park, 660 N. Ridge Ave.

THE MOST costly items on the list are the development of four park sites on the North Side and two on the south Side of the village.

The park site developments would cost an estimated $625,000, which would include the installation of three tennis courts at each of the parks.

Although the district already owns the land, officials say the sites cannot be developed in the foreseeable future without the passage of a bond issue.

Comr. Robert Rohleder rejected allegations that the park sites improvements proposal was added to the Oct. 2 referendum only to make it more attractive to voters on the North Side of the village.

"THIS IS NOT giving in to the North Side," Rohleder said. "They have four parks up there that need these improvements."

Lighting for softball diamonds at Recreation Park and the Wilke-Kirchoff retention basin would cost $225,000. Park Pres. Lloyd Meyer said fees from adult softball leagues could match that cost in about 10 years.

Meyer said adult softball is becoming more and more popular and there is no need to fear that the diamonds will not attract enough players to make the investment worthwhile.

THE OTHER MAJOR item on the list is $132,000 for the installation of EUCLID AVENUE, equipped with brand new left-turn lanes, will be opened to traffic today. The $200,000 project, which began in mid-July, was completed one week ahead of schedule. Some landscaping work remains unfinished and stoplights will not be installed at the intersection of Euclid and Walnut avenues until December, village officials said.

Zulu tribesmen kill at least 20 in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Chanting Zulu tribesmen armed with spears and long knives went on a bloody rampage through the streets of Soweto Wednesday, attacking black power militants trying to enforce a work boycott.

Witnesses said at least 20 blacks had been killed since the Zulus took to the streets of the suburb against the militants Tuesday and "bodies were still being counted."

Police opened fire several times on bands of both black militants and Zulus in spreading racial rioting which has killed 270 in nine weeks of strife.

BLACK WITNESSES said the Zulus, some charging behind cowhide battle-shields and armed with clubs, knives, sticks and spears, formed vigilante groups to attack black youths who tried to enforce the work boycott.

Brig. S.W. LeRoux, divisional police commissioner for Soweto, a segregated black enclave of one million about 15 miles south of Johannesburg, said the situation was "explosive and fluid."

Police officials warned Soweto residents to lock their doors and stay off the streets.

Witnesses said residents in some cases abandoned their homes in advance of the chanting Zulus, widely feared among blacks as ruthless fighters once they are angry. Several fleeing women lost their children in the frantic rush to safety.

The witnesses said the Zulus

FBI reports increase in suburb crime

A Herald staff report

Increasing awareness of crime, last year's economic slump, population mobility and permissive parental attitudes contributed to a rise in serious crimes locally in 1975, area law enforcement officials said Wednesday.

But police and municipal officials said figures released by the Federal Bureau of Investigation Wednesday showing an over-all 10 per cent rise in suburban crime do not necessarily indicate a trend of continually increasing crime.

In the Northwest suburban area, only Mount Prospect and Wheeling reported a decline from 1974 to 1975 in the level of serious crimes reported.

The largest increase was reported in Hoffman Estates, where the level of serious crimes rose almost 81 per cent, from 668 to 1,208.

The largest decrease came in Wheeling, where statistics reflected an 8 per cent decline, from 1,011 to 929.

NATIONALLY, THE figures show that serious crime rose 10 per cent over-all, 7 per cent in cities with populations in excess of 250,000, 10 per cent in suburban areas and 8 per cent in rural areas.

The statistics reflect seven areas of crime, including criminal homicide, which covers murder, nonnegligent and negligent manslaughter; forcible rape; robbery; aggravated assault; burglary or breaking and entering; larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft.

Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter said Wednesday the figures "are telling me that people are failing to control themselves." She cited the mobility of society, increasing growth in the multi-family population of the village, the unwillingness or inability of parents to control children, and youth rebellion as reasons for the increase.

SHE WAS CRITICAL that the figures do not reflect the number of cases solved, but expressed concern at figures for rape and murder, which were not reported in the village in 1974 but for which two cases were reported in 1975.

"People make the crime," she said. "They must report it and stop it."

Hoffman Estates Police Chief John O'Connell could not be reached to comment.

Poor economic conditions and a more mobile population were cited by Des Plaines Police Chief Arthur Hintz as responsible for the city's 16 per cent jump in serious crime.

"I think the economy had something to do with it and also think the mobility of people was a factor," he said. "The population used to be stable, but now there is a constant movement of people and I think that brings more crime."

HINTZ SAID HE believes crime is on the rise partially because of a more tolerant attitude by the public.

"I think maybe the training for the population is getting more lax toward crime than it was some years back," he said. "People have the attitude that this is not so bad and that's not so bad and seem to have a freer attitude."

Mount Prospect Police Chief Ralph J. Doney, whose community saw a slight 1 per cent drop in reported crime in 1975, said "preventative pa-

'Officer, I can explain my speeding . . .'

by DANN GIRE and DAVE IBATA

Buffalo Grove Patrolman Gary Del Re felt bad after he issued a speeding citation to a middle-aged driver.

"I'm sorry, officer. But my wife just died today," the man had said after accepting the ticket.

"I felt really bad to give him a ticket after his wife died," Del Re said. "I felt so terrible that later I called his home to talk to the guy — and his wife answered the phone!"

Coming up with a good excuse for speeding is becoming more and more difficult in the Northwest suburbs these days. While some excuses will exonerate the speeder, speeding drivers should be advised that most excuses are only good for laughs.

AND THAT'S what some policemen do in the privacy of their squad cars after delivering a citation to a motorist in a hurry.

Wheeling Police Chief M. O. Horcher recalls the time he tailed a car zipping through a 30-mile-per-hour speed zone at 55. He finally pulled the car over and asked the driver why he hadn't heeded the posted speed limit.

"This is a brand new car. I just got it," the man said. "They told me to break it in at 55. I can't go any slower."

Then there was the intoxicated driver who told Buffalo Grove officer Del Re he was speeding because "I was hurrying home to avoid an accident."

Mount Prospect Policeman Ray Rohde remembers the time he stopped a car and the driver said, "You got me!" but his wife lunged from her car seat and shouted, "You wouldn't give a ticket to a man who's just been married to a woman with six children, would you?" He did.

ROHDE WAS also the cop who stopped an 80-year-old man who said, "You'll have to excuse me, officer. I can't see as far as the traffic signs."

Today

A religious approach was used on Lt. James Scheski of the Des Plaines Police Dept. when he stopped a woman driver.

As he walked up to the car, the woman stuck her arm out the window with a rosary wrapped around her wrist and proclaimed loudly, "So help me God officer, I wasn't speeding."

One of Horchers' favorite speeding episodes was the time he chased across town a car driven by a woman who refused to stop. She finally screeched to a halt at a service station, jumped out of the car and rushed into the women's rest room before Horcher could write her a ticket.

A few minutes passed before the woman met Horcher at the door and said, "I betcha thought I wouldn't make it." She then climbed in her car and roared of while Horcher watched in amazement.

IN ADDITION to the more unusual excuses, cops also are deluged with more common rationales offered by speeders:

"That's impossible, officer, this car can't go that fast."

"I'm just keeping up with traffic."

"I've never been down this road before. I don't know where to look for the signs."

"I'm late for (work, court, an appointment, an emergency, to pick my husband/wife up, etc.)"

"But my speedometer doesn't work."

Women always are hurrying home to an unattended child, and doctors always are on their way to deliver a baby, even though golf bags are in the back seat, Scheski said.

Sgt. Peter Lippert and Patrolman William Urry of Buffalo Grove agree that 80 per cent of persons stopped for speeding actually receive a citation.

IN AN EFFORT to be sure they are within the 20 per cent who don't get tickets, some drivers also will offer a sum of money or sexual favors to the policeman. Chances are, police say, the offers will come out in court as "aggravation" by the speeder.

Of all drivers stopped for speeding, police say that housewives will cry the most, young professionals (doctors, attorneys, teachers, accountants, etc.) will cause the most problems and the average working man who is very polite to the policeman is most likely to take the ticket to court and win.

At Democratic state convention

Floor fight looms over abortion

The Illinois Democratic Party began considering its platform Wednesday with indications that the issue of abortion may result in a floor fight at the party's convention Sept. 8.

The party's platform committee heard recommendations that it take a position opposed to the one taken last month by the national party in New York City from proponents of a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion.

The national party platform acknowledges the "ethical and religious concerns" surrounding the abortion issue, but discourages a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion.

The state platform committee will adopt a recommended platform next week, which will be considered by the party convention in Chicago Sept. 8.

THE ABORTION issue first was raised Wednesday by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Michael Howlett, who went on record in New York opposing the national party abortion plank.

"I personally oppose abortion," Howlett said. "I respect the Supreme Court decision. I feel the Democratic platform went too far in discouraging people from redressing their grievances by seeking a constitutional amendment to change the decision."

Howlett said he does not believe the party must take a position favoring a constitutional amendment outlawing abortion, but added, "I think we should encourage people to use the system to redress any grievances they have with their government on any issue."

Laura Canning, a representative of the Illinois Citizens for Life, told the Democrats the state Right Life organization will support Howlett because of his stand on abortion but will not support Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, whose stand on the issue they believe is unacceptable.

"PRO-LIFERS are one-issue voters because without life there are no other issues," she said.

State Rep. George Sangmeister, D-Joliet, also called on the platform committee to draft an anti-abortion plank.

"The national party made a mistake in my opinion. I do not want to run for reelection on the national party platform on abortion. I would rather say the state party has taken an opposite position," Sangmeister said.

Several members of the platform committee told Sangmeister during a question-answer period that they would prefer the state platform to remain silent on the abortion issue.

FORMER CHICAGO Ald. Mary Lou Hedlund, who was a member of the national platform committee, said Sangmeister, "can hold your head high and oppose any number of the planks in the national platform, but I think as a state party we should take a courageous position and say that everything is not the business of government and that abortion is one of those issues."

Following his statement to the committee, Sangmeister said he hopes the platform committee will draft an acceptable plank on abortion. He said if it does not, the issue may be taken to the convention floor.

The state party's last platform, drafted in 1974, contains no reference to the abortion issue. Platform committee chairman Ray Simon said the party did not take a position on the issue two years ago because "it was very hard to honestly give a consensus of what the party stood for. There are Democrats and Republicans who feel very strongly on both sides of the issue."

Simon said Howlett's position "seems to be expressing a midle ground" and that a compromise platform plank might be worked out that would encourage proponents of a constitutional amendment, but would not support or oppose the amendment.

'Antivandal code might be illegal'

An antivandalism law proposed for Wheeling and based on a Northbrook law holding parents responsible for the vandalism committed by their children may be unconstitutional, Wheeling Village Atty. John Burke said. Burke said a provision requiring parents of vandals to pay fines or make restitution for the vandalism of their children "presents a serious constitutional question. I doubt the ordinance's constitutionality. I don't see how parents can be held responsible for their children's actions. It's not done in criminal law," Burke said in a report to village trustees.

School probe nears an end

An investigation into financial irregularities at Addams Junior High School, 700 Springinsguth Rd., Schaumburg, is expected to be completed within a week by the Cook County State's Attorney's office. Susan Sherwin, administrative assistant in charge of the investigation, said the office has been interviewing administrators in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 on the issue. Although she would not release details on the case, sources told The Herald the student activities fund and Robert Cizek, former Addams principal, are being investigated. Cizek said when he resigned in June that he knew of no mishandling of money at the school.

Zulu tribesmen stage bloody rampage slashed militants who had threatened other blacks and went to work. The witnesses said the Zulus dragged off some black women.

Earlier about 5,000 Zulus rejected a call from tribal leader Gideon Phebe urging them to stop attacking the militants.

Joseph Mashiga, a spokesman for the Zulu workers at the Nzimhlophe hostel which houses 10,500 tribesmen, told a television interviewer:

"We only ask the law to let us into the location (Soweto) to see the people who burned down our hostel, and then everything will be quiet and they will stop all this black power."

The tribesmen went on the rampage through Soweto Tuesday after a group of blacks set fire to three wings of the Zulu hostel.

Police declined to give an official death figure, saying only that "bodies are still being counted."

The latest rioting turned black against black for the first time and some witnesses reported that police idly watched the bloody internecine fighting which Soweto detective chief Col. Jan Visser said involved about 10,000 blacks.

Black witnesses said the Zulu gangs, enraged by student militants setting fire to their hostels, formed vigilante groups to escort workers returning from Johannesburg.

The witnesses said the Zulus charged through the dusty streets of Soweto, kicking down doors of private homes, hacking residents and their guests with knives and in some cases dragging young women off to hostels.

Police minister Jimmy Kruger said the tribal bloodshed was a backlash against antigovernment dissidents. He said police would not condone "counter-violence."

Police commissioner Gert Prinsloo said he would investigate newspaper allegations that his forces stood by during some clashes.

"If people want to organize themselves into resisting "tsotsis" (thugs), we can't stop them," Prinsloo said.

Visser described the charges as "infamous lies" and said on a number of occasions "we had to open fire to protect the Zulus from mobs of militants."

Police also fired at demonstrators near Cape Town, South Africa's second largest city, 1,000 miles south of here, but no deaths were reported.

The Cape Town violence erupted in the mulatto township of Bonteheuwel when crowds at a shopping center pelted cars with stones and smashed shop windows. Snarling dogs and teargas dispersed the demonstrators and police sealed off the township.

Police said that during Tuesday night thousands of Soweto residents fled the street fighting and camped on open ground near the Meadowlands police station to seek protection.

BLACK RESIDENTS in Soweto Township drag away dead man after police fired on demonstrators in renewed violence. Zulu tribesmen, meantime, armed with knives and spears went on a bloody rampage through the streets. Several fleeing women lost their children in the frantic rush to safety. The Zulus are widely feared among blacks as ruthless once they become angry.

Morton dropped as Ford campaign chief

by United Press International

James A. Baker, the Texas lawyer who rounded up the delegates President Ford needed to win the GOP presidential nomination, was given the job Wednesday of rounding up the votes Ford needs to beat Jimmy Carter in November.

In a major shakeup of the Ford campaign staff, Baker was named to replace Rogers C. B. Morton as chairman. Morton has been in disfavor since his frank admission during the primary battles that Ford was doing poorly, adding "we aren't rearranging the deck chairs on the Titantic yet."

Ford rearranged his staff and called a GOP summit meeting at his Vail vacation retreat Thursday of his running mate, Sen. Robert Dole, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and former Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

At the same time, his November opponent was stumping through middle America — thought to be Ford's political base — blasting the administration farm policy.

In Des Moines, Carter told Iowa farmers that the Republican's embargo on foreign grain shipments plus grain inspection scandals had heavily damaged American export trade.

At the Iowa State Fair, Carter said he would not ban shipments of grain to Russia as the administration did in 1974.

"Every time Nixon, Ford and (Agriculture Secretary Earl) Butz have imposed a new export embargo, it has caused permanent damage to export markets, and every time they delay tough and honest grain inspection, the damage is multiplied many times over," Carter said.

Dole, following Carter as Ford's one man truth squad, will give the GOP side of the story in Des Moines Thursday. Wednesday he followed Carter's appearance by a day at an American Legion convention in Seattle.

The Kansas Republican said in Seattle that Ford was totally opposed to amnesty or pardon for Vietnam draft resisters. The same crowd booed Carter Tuesday when he said he would grant a blanket pardon — but not amnesty for the thousands who refused to fight in Vietnam.

Ford also told reporters that former GOP national chairman Dean Burch and William Ruckelshaus, the former deputy attorney general fired by Richard Nixon in the "Saturday Night Massacre," would go to Washington later in the week to negotiate with Carter aides on a series of debates between the two candidates.

Baker, 46, came out of the obscurity of a Houston oil law firm two months ago to play the firemen's role in lining up the delegates Ford needed for the nomination. Delegate by delegate, Baker wooed the uncommitteds at White House state dinners and in private meetings until Ford had the 1,130 needed to win in Kansas City.

He played the role of neither conservative nor moderate Republican as he converted delegates from both the Deep South and the Northeast to the Ford cause.

Morton never wanted the job of heading the Ford committee — a post he was thrust into five months ago when Howard "Bo" Callaway resigned after he was accused of using his influence while secretary of the Army to benefit his Rocky Mountain resort development.

Baker's selection was seen as backing up statements by Ford that the GOP ticket was not yielding the South to Carter in the fall election.

Slavery is widespread; $2 for baby

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Slavery is still widespread in Latin America and Africa with babies being sold for $2 in some places, a U.S. report said Wednesday. The United States called for greater world attention to the problem.

The report, drawn up by the Working Group on Slavery of the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, also said apartheid policies of South Africa (Rhodesia) were tantamount to slavery and named four Central American nations where forced labor was practiced.

The report said the situation of the Ache indians of Paraguay is critical.

"The current purchase price of a child is two dollars," it said.

The report, added that "Prof. Chase-Sardi, a distinguished Paraguayan anthropologist who has been engaged on a project of teaching the indigenous people, has been released after being arrested and tortured, and one of his assistants disappeared without a trace."

The report said "the virtual enslavement of many peasants for agricultural labor" prevails, in El Salvador, Honduras, Guatamala and Nicaragua.

It added forced labor exists in Equatorial Guinea and charged the system of apartheid in South Africa amounts to the practice of slavery while in Rhodesia there is even a law legalizing slavery-like practices.

The Rhodesian law, dating from 1901 and called the "masters and servants act," covers all employes in domestic service, agriculture, forestry, mining and quarrying.

"It stipulates punishment for absence without leave, intoxication, careless or improper performance of work, disobedience, abusive or insulting language, or leaving a 'master's service without lawful cause.' "

"On discharge from prison, if the employe fails to resume his service he can be sentenced to successive terms of one month's imprisonment under similar conditions until he consents to and does resume his service," the report said.

This Rhodesian law, it said, "is a practice akin to slavery."

Move back DMZ guardposts: Reds

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UPI) — The United States Wednesday insisted on punishment for the Communist guards who killed two American officers one week ago. North Korea shrugged off the demand but suggested troops in the Demilitarized Zone be moved farther apart to avoid future clashes.

The Communist delegate to the meeting of the Military Armistice Commission repeated North Korean President Kim Ilsung's message to the United States that the death in the truce zone separating the two Koreas was "regrettable."

But he did not continue the propaganda fanfare in which North Korea has charged the United States caused the buildup of tension.

Rear Adm. Mark P. Frudden, chief truce delegate of the United Nations Command, promised a full study of North Korea's suggestion that guardposts be moved back on each side of the 2½-mile-wide DMZ. But he stressed U.S. insistence on reparations for the attack on U.S. officers and South Korean troops pruning a tree in the truce zone last Wednesday.

"The fact remains that two U.N.C. officers were brutally beaten to death without provocation and that effect calls for punishment of those responsible for the act," Frudden said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Robert L. Funseth said the United States was "studying their (North Korea's) proposal. However, I want to emphasize we are holding the North Koreans strictly responsible for the security of U.N. Command personnel, regardless of any internal arrangements that might be made within the DMZ."

South Korean officials said they were surprised at the mild tone of the Communist delegation. "This is not what they used to do," a South Korean stationed at Panmunjom said. "This clearly indicates that they are backing down."

The United States' 42,000 troops, backed up in the past week by a 7th Fleet task force and extra squadrons of warplanes, remained on alert status, as did more than a million troops in both Koreas.

"I have called this meeting for one purpose, and that was to inform you that our side calls for punishment of those responsible for the murder of the two UNC officers," the American officer said at the tense, 48-minute meeting, the 380th since the truce in 1953.

"Moreover, we insist on assurances that the safety of UNC personnel in the Joint Security Area at Panmunjom will be preserved and that the freedom of activity guaranteed to both sides will be respected, and that to those ends you will issue orders to your personnel. . . ."

Giant forest fires rage in northlands

by United Press International

Nebraska's governor planned Wednesday to declare 25 counties drought disaster areas, and forest fires crackled through thousands of acres of tinder-dry woodlands in the Midwest northtlands.

Gov. J. J. Exon said he would meet with advisers Friday and "based on the information I have now, I will be declaring a disaster area in some 25 counties."

The long dry summer baking much of the Midwest was the key factor in two giant forest fires in Michigan and Minnesota.

"It's so dry in Upper Michigan and a lot of Minnesota the air crackles," a National Weather Service spokesman said.

More than 360 firefighters from seven states were trying to contain the fire that has burned over 30,000 acres in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

The fire in the Seney National Wildlife Refuge and the adjacent Manistique State Forest was Michigan's worst of its kind in 37 years. Airborne tankers were flown in from Alaska to water-bomb the blaze. Firefighters came from as far off as Idaho. Vacationing tourists were warned to stay out of the area.

The firefighters were hindered by bogs and swamps.

"It's difficult for the men to get into many areas because they find themselves waist deep in swamp," a spokesman said. "We just can't take our equipment into some areas."

He said a bulldozer sank in one swamp.

Two B17 bombers and six other aircraft were dumping about 50,000 gallons of water a day on the fire eating its way through 2,600 acres of Minnesota's eastern Boundary Waters Canoe Area.

It was the worst of 50 to 60 forest, grass and peat bog fires going in the state. State Conservation Commissioner Robert Herbst called the fire danger the "most serious since 1936 and possibly the worst since 1918."

Congressman Howe receives 30-day suspended sentence

• Congressman Allan Howe, facing a dim political future and possible disbarment, Wednesday was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence for trying to buy sex from two police decoys posing as prostitutes. District Court Judge Bryant Croft gave the Utah Democrat 60 days to pay the cost of his two-day appeals trial as a condition of suspension of the jail term. The congressman's sentencing followed the arrest Tuesday night of his campaign manager, Tim Allen, 24, on a drug charge. Allen was arrested at his home and charged with distribution of a controlled substance for value.

• The House Ethics Committee voted to subpoena CBS reporter Daniel Schorr to testify next month about who gave him a secret intelligence report which he leaked to the Village Voice newspaper. Also subpoenaed were Clay Fekler, editor in chief of the New York weekly; Aaron Latham, who wrote the introduction to the article, and Shelly Zalaznick, printer of the article.

• An Omaha woman, told by her adoptive parents that she was part American Indian has filed suit to open sealed records of her adoption. If successful she may get a share of a multimillion dollar tribal settlement. Bonnie Eva McKain filed suit in Douglas County District Court. She was adopted by a Sarpy County couple when she was less than a year old. Mrs. McKain's lawsuit notes she has been told by her adoptive parents she has one-quarter Blackfoot Indian blood. As a result, she may be entitled to part of a recent $5.6 million government settlement with the tribe.

• A hearing will be held next Tuesday on a complaint by Alyce McMahon, former wife of TV personality, Ed McMahon, linking him to an alleged plan to sell — without her consent — a $200,000 home she and her four children occupy.

• Actor James Caan and his second wife, Sheila, are the parents of a 6½-pound son, Scott Andrew. Caan also has a daughter, Tara, 11, from his first marriage.

• Hollywood burglars stole more than $250,000 worth of jewelry and other valuables from the home of Marguerite Mays Sewell, former wife of baseball star Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and New York Mets, police said. The burglars broke into the home she shares with her husband, John Sewell, while they were away last week. The thieves stole a diamond ring valued at $140,000, a $40,000 diamond medallion, a television set, rugs, cameras and guns.

3 Chowchilla kidnap suspects indicted

A grand jury concluded three days of hearings into the Chowchilla bus kidnap case Wednesday by handing down 45 indictments against each of the three major suspects in the case. Fred Woods, 24, a member of a wealthy Northern California family; James Schoenfeld, 24, and his brother, Richard, 22, sons of a San Francisco Peninsula foot doctor, were each charged with 27 counts of kidnaping and 18 of robbery in the kidnaping of 26 Chowchilla children and their school bus driver, according to chief prosecutor Richard Haugner.

New 'Legion Disease' case confirmed

The manager of four Philadelphia hotels was in critical condition Wednesday with a case of the mysterious "Legionnaire's Disease" that killed 26 persons following a state American Legion convention last month. A state Health Department official said the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed that J. Bruce Rogers, 60, Moorestown, N.J., was suffering from the illness. He visited the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel during the time the convention was headquartered there and also ate at the hotel twice after that. Rogers was one of two new reported cases of the illness.

Viking test hints life on Mars

Viking 1 scientists said Wednesday a test in one of the Martian robot's biology instrument leaves them with either a "biological interpretation" of data — life — or fancier chemistry than scientists have seen before. "If we had observed these results in the laboratory we would have concluded we had a weak but positive biological signal. But since it comes from Mars, a world we don't understand yet, we have to be very careful in how we interpret these numbers," Dr. Norman Horowitz, a biologist, said. The data confirmed that earlier results, before sterilization of the soil, indicated unusual activity either chemical or biological.

Senate OKs U.S. funds for abortions

The Senate, rejecting House demands to back off, Wednesday again approved the use of federal funds to perform abortions. The vote was 53 to 35. The one-sided rejection deepened the rift between the two chambers on the explosive issue of abortions and threatened congressional approval of the $56.6 billion fiscal 1977 money bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. Senate leaders immediately asked for another meeting with House negotiators in an effort to work out a compromise.

Egypt nominates Sadat for second term

The Egyptian parliament Wednesday unanimously nominated President Anwar Sadat for a second six-year term that is certain to be overwhelmingly endorsed in a national plebiscite next month. A beaming Sadat appeared before the House to accept the nomination. "In accepting this nomination, I accept an assignment and respond to a call from our dear Egypt whose beckoning must always be heeded," the president said in a 15-minute speech. His nomination, approved by all 366 parliamentarians present at Wednesday's session, now goes to the nation for ratification in a yes-no referendum scheduled for Sept. 16.

Chicago teachers can live elsewhere

The Chicago Board of Education Wednesday failed to muster enough votes to approve a proposed employe residence requirement. The proposal, if adopted, would have required all employes now living in the city to remain in Chicago and new employes would have had to move into the city within 90 days before being hired.

The vote was 5-4 in favor of the proposal with one "present" vote. Eight votes were needed to adopt the proposal.

AIP asked: oppose gun laws

Elliott Graham told the American Independent party's platform hearings Wednesday his gun organization makes the National Rifle Association look "like a liberal group." Graham was one of several witnesses to propound a conservative cause at the hearings, being held in advance of the party's presidential nominating convention starting Thursday.

The 40-member committee was not expected to have a final platform draft until the convention officially opens, but members spent all day Wednesday listening to lengthy presentations by non-delegates. Elliott Graham, representing the American Pistol and Revolver Association, said his organization is "so strong that the NRA (National Rifle Association) looks like a liberal group compared to us." Graham asked the convention to go on record opposing all gun licensing laws.

Another platform witness was Armin Moths, a representative of the El Cajon, Calif., United States Taxpayers Union. Moths proposed prosecution of "legislators who sponsor, introduce or pass legislation which violates any individual rights granted by the U. S. Constitution." He also urged repeal of excise tax on telephone calls because "to my way of thinking, that tax violates our right to free speech."

Carter draft stand backed

Sen. Walter Mondale said Wednesday Jimmy Carter's plan to pardon Vietnam draft evaders will "contribute to the health of American society." Carter's position "is a good one, a sound one, and the more the American people understand it, the more they'll find that's the case," the Democratic vice presidential candidate told a news conference.

Carter was booed at the American Legion convention in Seattle when he said he would give blanket pardons to Vietnam draft resisters. Mondale commented "At some point America has to come back together again, reunify itself, try to end the bitterness that remains and bring families back together again. I think it will contribute to the health of American society."

Mondale, appearing with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley after the two met privately for 35 minutes, also said he generally agrees with his running mate on abortion. "I do not think it should be encouraged," he said. "I, however, do not favor a constitutional amendment" to ban it. Mondale said he does not believe the Democratic ticket will have "a Catholic problem," even though leaders of the Roman Catholic church are angered by the Democratic platform plank opposing a constitutional amendment.

GLA busline 'threatened'

State Rep. Calvin L. Skinner Wednesday said the Illinois Commerce Commission may stop the only bus service available in parts of Lake and McHenry counties. Skinner made the comment prior to an ICC hearing to determine whether the Geneva Lake (Wis.) Area Joint Transit Commission has authority to pick up and discharge passengers in Illinois. GLA operates four bus routes between the Lake Geneva, Wis., area and Illinois train commuter stations and O'Hare Airport, Skinner said. The busline also picks up and discharges passengers at intermediate stops in Illinois. The O'Hare-Wisconsin Limousine service, which operates over some of the GLA routes, recently filed a complaint with the ICC charging the GLA is a public utility operating without a license in Illinois.

Springfield sues to end teacher strike

The Springfield Board of Education filed suit in Sangamon County Circuit Court Wednesday seeking an injunction to stop a strike by some 950 of the city's 1,000 teachers. Judge John Paul Verticchio refused to rule in the case and instead set a hearing for 1:30 p.m. Thursday. The teachers went on strike with the first day of classes Wednesday after voting overwhelmingly Tuesday night in favor of a walkout. Pickets went up early Wednesday.

In Carbondale, the Carbondale High School Board of Education has called for the services of a federal mediator in an effort to settle a strike by some 90 teachers that entered its third day Wednesday. The teachers' association said it supported the board's call for a mediator.

In Harrisburg, some 150 teachers in the Harrisburg Unit 3 School District went on strike Wednesday after rejecting what was described as the school board's "final offer" in wage reopening negotiations after the first year of a two-year agreement.

In Vandalia, classroom work for more than 2,000 students in the Vandalia Unit 3 School District was called off Wednesday, the first day of school and the third day of a strike by teachers. Officials said students were being registered. The strike is by some 93 members of the Vandalia Unit Teachers Association which says that seniority has replaced wages as its top priority issue.

View auto race noise

Proposed noise regulations for auto race tracks will be discussed Sept. 8 in Chicago at a Pollution Control Board hearing. The proposals, drawn up by the state Environmental Protection Agency after meetings with racing industry representatives, suggest:

- All racing vehicles, except those like fuel dragsters and funny cars whose performance would be impaired, must have a muffler. EPA noise regulation experts say this requirement could be met by next year. Muffled racers would still roar but not as loud as they do now.
- Tracks be exempt from certain noise regulations between 7 a.m. and 10:30 p.m.
- Some tracks be exempt from all noise regulations, including those with under five racing days a year, those with no houses nearby and those whose racing noise level is no more than seven decibels higher than usual.

Sodium lights for Northwest Hwy.

Sodium vapor streetlights will be installed next spring along Northwest Highway between Highland Avenue and Wilke Road, according to village engineers.

The $186,000 project will be funded through a special assessment to affected property owners.

When completed, Northwest Highway will have lights from the village's eastern boundary at Mount Prospect to its western boundary at Palatine.

William Bachem of the village's engineering department said the lighting project calls for 48 poles. They will be placed on the south side of Northwest Highway, he said.

The village will pay approximately 50 per cent of the cost of the program, with about 50 property owners being assessed for the remaining portion, according to Kenneth Stonesifer, attorney for the village's Board of Local Improvements.

Property owners have until Sept. 20 to file objections to the special assessments. The bid letting process then will begin.

Conventions cited in rush to sign up to vote

The political excitement generated by the Democratic and Republican national conventions this summer has spurred voter registration in Arlington Heights.

Arlington Heights Village Clerk Ruth Ruff said that nearly 200 persons registered to vote last week as the Republicans staged their convention in Kansas City. A similar rush occurred last month when the Democrats met in New York, she said.

More than 35,000 Arlington Heights residents are registered to vote, an increase of more than 7,000 in the past year, Mrs. Ruff said.

Sept. 17 is the last day village residents may register at the village hall, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd., and be eligible to vote in the November general election.

Registrations will be accepted by the Cook County clerk until Sept. 27.

The county will conduct a special registration at all precinct headquarters in Arlington Heights from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 5, Mrs. Ruff said.

Suburban crime on rise: FBI

troling and the initiation of certain programs to deter burglary" have helped hold down certain crime.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert said crime prevention "is a constant battle" and added the village should not "get over-confident" because of the stable figures.

"FRANKLY, WITH THE better reporting techniques and considering an increase in population and urbanization, I think it's just great if we stay even," he said. "I suppose it's a gain if we stay even."

Reported crimes in Buffalo Grove increased 15 per cent, from 471 in 1974 to 543 in 1975.

"Any increase is not good," said Village Pres. Edward Fabish. Fabish attributed the increase in part to a rise in the number of teen-agers in the village, who are the highest crime group, he said. He said the increase seems to be higher than the percentage increase in population.

Arlington Heights Acting Police Chief Paul Buckholz said he believes the actual increase in crime is smaller than the numbers indicate, but added "people are getting a bellyful. They are getting frightened and angry."

HE SAID AS A result citizens are more willing to report crimes, but added that "tolerance for violence is up" and contributes to occurrences of serious crime.

Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case called the 23 per cent rise in reported crimes in the city "a normal increase with the amount of people we have moving here."

But Case said he does not see the general suburban increase as one that will continue.

"I don't think so," he said. "I feel it will stabilize. We're getting better crime reporting statistics and that's good. That lists crimes like battery, the Class A crimes, and they never were listed before."

SCHAUMBURG POLICE Chief Martin J. Conroy said much of the crime reported in the village unfairly reflects thefts at the Woodfield Shopping Center.

"I really object to this because communities with big shopping centers wind up with huge totals on this score, even if many of the thefts represent about $1.50," he said.

"They give out numbers and never say anything about the size of the community," he said. "You have to remember I'm working with my own 43,000 people and another, what, 35,000 in (Hoffman Estates)," he said.

Elk Grove Village Police Chief Harry P. Jenkins said increased resident awareness has led to better and more thorough reporting of crime.

"I'm sure the slump in the economy in 1975 affected the number of burglaries, thefts and even assaults, with fights over money in the home," Jenkins added. "There is no doubt there is more crime due to the population increase."

Parks to mull project list for vote walkway and playground lighting at 15 parks.

Plans call for five new courts at Greenbrier and Dryden parks for $50,000 and the lighting of five courts at the Forest View Tennis Club for $50,000.

If the commissioners decide to put the entire $1.3 million improvement package before the voters with the $1.5 million for the golf course, its passage would mean an increase of about $10 to $20 a year on the average Arlington Heights tax bill.

Wayne A. Benjamin, municipal financial consultant hired by the park district for the referendum, estimated the owner of a $50,000 house would pay an additional $11.25 a year and the owner of a $70,000 house would pay an extra $15.75 a year if both parts of the referendum are approved.

Austrian troupe in arena Sunday

A troupe of 24 Austrian folk artists will perform in Arlington Heights Saturday as part of the national Bicentennial cultural program sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution.

The 8 p.m. concert at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., is under the auspices of the church and the American Austrian Society of the Midwest.

Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children. They are available at the church, Schneller Furniture Co. and The Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights.

A free preview concert will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday in the Schneller Furniture parking lot, 17 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights.

The dancers, singers and musicians will perform in their colorful native costumes, which represent different regions and provinces of Austria and a panorama of Austrian music traditions.

The Arlington Heights performance concludes the group's United States tour, which began earlier this month with a one-week appearance at the Festival of American Folklife in Washington, D.C.

St. Peter's Lutheran Church also is sponsoring an "Oktoberfest in August" at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, featuring a $1.25 plate dinner of sausages and sauerkraut as well as beer and wine.

Supreme Court OKs RTA budget

by LYNN ASINOF

The Illinois Supreme Court Wednesday ruled that the Regional Transportation Authority's $177.8 million 1976-77 budget is legal.

The decision allows the RTA to begin distributing needed subsidies to area bus, train and rapid transit systems. Funds were cut off after the RTA Board failed to approve its budget by the legal deadline of June 30.

Justice Daniel Ward announced the decision in Chicago, saying the court will issue a written opinion on the matter later. The court heard arguments on the case Monday.

The decision ends five months of budget wrangling that began when four suburban RTA Board directors threatened to block passage of the budget to force the ouster of Chairman Milton Pikarsky. The four blocked the budget for 19 days, before agreeing to a compromise that limited Pikarsky's power.

LOOP ATTORNEY Richard Kates filed suit asking that the budget be declared invalid because it was approved after the deadline.

RTA attorneys argued that the deadline was not "holier than holy," and should be regarded as a guideline rather than a requirement. The RTA would have been out of business for at least one year if the budget were ruled invalid.

RTA officials said they expect money to start flowing to the transit companies as early as Wednesday afternoon.

"The RTA staff expects to have a number of subsidy grant applications available for approval by the RTA board of directors at its meeting next week," Pikarsky said.

The North Suburban Mass Transit District, which provides bus service in the North and Northwest suburbs, is expected to be one of the first in line for funding. NORTRAN was forced to borrow money from its communities to continue operations through the summer.

"I'M TOLD THAT we'll be on the Sept. 1 RTA agenda," said Joseph DiJohn, NORTRAN executive director. "Sometime next week we'll get the money and we'll repay our communities as soon as possible."

Kates said he accepts the decision, but added he hoped the written opinion would contain provisions for "a certain future view to protect the public from this recurring thing."

Although the budgetary crisis is over, suburban director Jerry D. Boose of St. Charles said the ruling will not solve either monetary problems or the continuing battle between suburban directors and Pikarsky.

"Those problems are not going to go away by this decision," he said.

BOOSE SAID the suburban directors plan to quietly continue their battle with Pikarsky, voicing dissatisfaction with his leadership.

Director D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston said he hopes the RTA can now begin working on several priority matters, such as a detailed transit program for the coming year. He said he also is concerned about the stalemate in negotiations with two commuter railroads over purchase of service agreements.

Other suburban directors include Gene Leonard of Oak Forest and Richard Newland of Waukegan.

I'm here to practice on the new voting machine. Where are the cards I'm to punch out?

The way we see it

Learn new voting system

Northwest suburban voters should welcome the announcement that the familiar lever-type voting machines will be absent from the polls Nov. 2 and make it a point to become familiar with the new computer voting system.

The new system, which uses punch card ballots, has been adopted for suburban Cook County use this November. It will mean Cook County residents will be using a system much like those in use for several years in neighboring Lake and DuPage counties.

The new system is simple and will have many advantages over the traditional lever-type machines. The county will save money using the new system and expects to have vote counts earlier on election night.

The Cook County clerk's office has set up an extensive voter education system which will involve demonstrations of the new voting system in Jewel, Dominick's and National food stores, local banks and savings and loan offices and municipal and township halls.

The groups involved in the education effort, including the food stores and financial institutions, are demonstrating genuine public spirited concern in aiding this effort. In many cases the firms' employes will be doing the demonstrations, at no cost to the county, but at some cost to the store or bank involved.

All these education efforts will fail, however, without the cooperation and concern of the people they are aimed at. Voters should, between now and the election, make a point of availing themselves of the chance to learn the new system.

The system is not complicated and involves only inserting the punch-card ballot into the machine which has the names of candidates and punching holes. It will take only a short time to learn.

Learning it will, however, certainly be best done in the local food store or financial institution, not in the polls on election day when some voters will be rushed and others will be nervous about the new system.

Just as voters ultimately must rely on their own initiative to become informed about election issues, despite all the efforts by candidates and the news media to inform them, so voters must take the responsibility for knowing how the voting system works.

If everyone accepts that responsibility, this election should go smoothly and the new voting system should benefit everyone.

Freud in the penny arcade

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To the surprise of exactly nobody, psychiatrists have started using computers to help analyze their patients' problems.

Techniques may vary from place to place, but in one program I was reading about various psychological tests and questionnaires are reproduced on the computer's display terminal, which resembles a TV screen.

The patients punch their responses on a keyboard, which resembles a typewriter. Then the computer provides printouts with personality and intellect assessments, which resemble nothing you ever saw.

Apart from whatever clinical value it might have, the marriage of psychoanalysis to cybernetics also has great commercial possibilities.

I am thinking in particular of its adaption for use in such places as airports, bowling alleys and amusement arcades.

A popular feature in these places is electronic games played on coin-activated devices that also are similar to TV screens.

Some are quiz show type games. Questions in various categories appear on the screen and the player who presses the right answer button first scores X-number of points. Fun, fun, fun.

Now suppose you were trapped in an airport between planes and had an hour or so to kill. And suppose that by dropping a quarter into a machine in the lobby, you could have your id and ego analyzed by a computer.

Wouldn't that be a more interesting way to pass the time than playing electronic trivia? Of course it would.

As I envision it, you lie down on a naugahyde couch, feed the computer a quarter and on the screen appears a list of 10 common phobias and neuroses.

You pick an emotional block that matches one of your personal hangups — fear of flying would be a natural for airport lobbies — and the computer probes your psyche with a series of questions that you answer by pressing buttons.

Then it gives you a printout evaluation suggesting that your fear of flying stems from a subconscious aversion to falling a long way without a parachute.

The beauty of computer analysis is that you don't need another player like you do in many electronic games. Thus you can avail yourself of the diversion even when traveling alone.

Missing, however, is the element of competition. That shortcoming could be eliminated by programming some of the computers for two-way use.

I have in mind a personality analysis game called "Rorschach."

After each player deposits a quarter, a series of ink blots appear on the screen. The players indicate what object each abstract shape reminds them of.

At the end of the game, the computer analyzes their responses and the player with the better emotional integration wins.

Baby headline in poor taste

The article in your Metropolitan Briefs column on Aug. 19, 'Garbage' baby in good condition, demonstrates both a lack of sensitivity by the one responsible for the "Garbage" headline and a lack of editorial responsibility by those who permitted it to stand.

Paddock Publications is supposed to be a family type publication but the "Garbage Baby" headline would seem to come from the National Enquirer.

The article dealt with a near tragic situation and reference to the child in that manner reflected a lack of good taste which we hope will not be repeated.

Words of praise

As a delegate to the Republican National Convention, I applaud the professionalism of Herald political reporter, Steve Brown, and chief photographer, Bob Finch, during the Convention. In fact, Illinoisans can be proud of the Illinois press in general.

While many other representatives from the media were often rude on and off the Convention floor and emphasized "sensationalism," our local and other Illinois press worked very hard but responsibly reported the news as it actually happened.

There was a hard fought contest between the Ford and the Reagan backers. But by the end of the week the Illinois Delegation was united.

AS REPORTED, much of the credit for this unity should be given to the leaders of the Ford camp — Dick Ogilvie, Chuck Percy and Harold B. Smith — and to the leaders of the Reagan camp — Don Totten and Phil Crane.

Tenth District delegates Jim Kemper and Clem Stone should also be singled out for their co-sponsorship of a reception that Illinois delegates and alternates hosted for California's 100 per cent Reagan delegation.

While these and other Reagan committed delegates and alternates conducted a spirited campaign for a great American and Republican leader, most are now genuinely and enthusiastically on the Ford — Dole team.

Now is the time for all Northwest suburban Republicans and our Democrat and independent friends to do the same and elect President Ford, Bob Dole, Jim Thompson and our other local and statewide Republican candidates in November.

Editorial phrase improper

On Saturday, Aug. 14, 1976, on the editorial page of the Schaumburg Herald, there appeared an editorial concerning the prowess of the Chicago White Sox. In that editorial, you refer to their owner, Bill Veeck, as "one-legged owner." This editorial comment affirmed my previous thoughts concerning the quality of your editorial page. The fact that in my mind your newspaper and its editorial page are totally irresponsible to the community and particularly to people. When a newspaper has to stoop to the depths of picking on physical infirmities of people to identify them, then that paper and its editorial staff should be disbanded. We are only fortunate, in this case, that the owner of the White Sox was not a woman who recently underwent a mastectomy. We try to teach our children that they should not, under any circumstances, pick on physical infirmities of their classmates or their playmates and make this a subject of jest in the community, however, your paper has deemed to use Mr. Veeck's amputation, a rather traumatic event, as a method of identifying him. Your editorial page acting in this manner makes your entire newspaper sound more like an underground newspaper than a responsible neighborhood paper.

Edgar A. Feldman, M.D.
Elgin

(Editor's note: While the loss of his leg surely was a traumatic event for Veeck, he has not treated it as a demeaning or debilitating loss. He has, in fact, publicly discussed his condition. We meant no disrespect and regret that any reader should be offended by the reference.)

Plaines, Ga.—Pop. 638

The crowds continue to pour into this southern town to walk the streets hoping for a glimpse of Jimmy Carter

PLAINS, Ga. (LENS) — No particular reason appears for anybody to stop in Plains. It is so small and undistinguished that it is easier to drive right through. It is not especially old, not in the least picturesque, and no different from hundreds of other small southern towns. There is not even a hamburger stand.

But every day they come by the hundreds — a thousand a day is one local estimate — to park their air-conditioned cars and stroll in the 100 degree heat along the single block of stores that is downtown Plains, taking photographs, buying souvenirs and hoping above all for just a glimpse of "Jimmy."

Plains, population 638, is the home of Jimmy Carter, the Democratic presidential candidate. Anyone unaware of that would probably not come, but an amnesiac wanderer would be reminded by the red, white and blue sign, affixed to the last building on Main Street: "Plains, Georgia, home of Jimmy Carter our next president."

That is on the converted shop that houses the magnificently named "Carter-Mondale press office," furnished with telephones. Next door is another shop being converted hurriedly into a delicatessen; next along the covered sidewalk is Turner's hardware and department store, which sells wolverine work shoes, hats against near tropical sun and other oddments.

Then comes the Carter worm farm office, owned by Uncle Hugh Carter; the worms are the sort used by fishermen, and supplying them is apparently a thriving business.

Uncle Hugh also owns the alleged antique store next door which offers almost nothing that could even remotely be called antique, and many splendid examples of what is usually called sharp Yankee trading. A middle-aged coffee-tin, for example, containing two broken mousetraps and some bits of obscure hardware, is priced at $5. A pressed-glass celery dish goes for $19. The paper back edition of Carter's own book "Why Not the Best?" is marked at 50 cents above the publisher's price.

Two grocers' shops, a pharmacy and that is about all there is of Plains' Main Street, except for the tracks of the Seaboard Coastline Railroad that run along its length. But at the far end of the street is the former railroad depot, now a sort of shrine.

It is an ordinary small town railroad station, ornamented with a green-and-white sign proclaiming it Carter's headquarters. His mother, 77-year-old Mrs. Lillian Carter — known in southern style as "Miss (or "Miz") Lillian" — is here most days, chatting affably, signing autographs and posing for photographs.

One sign reads, "Dr.'s orders. Please no flash bulb pictures of Mrs. Lillian Carter. Picture without flash OK. Thank you." She has an eye ailment which the flashbulbs' brilliance exacerbates.

The station is a shrine to Carter and to the people who visit it, as well as to the myths about the past that Americans love to believe. There are, indeed, photos of Mr. Carter at different stages of his political career. And there is a potbellied stove, a crocheted American flag, and a homemade checker board with two rocking chairs drawn up.

In a smaller room beyond are a guest book to sign, and boxes of peanuts with a "Carter's warehouse" label to be purchased. Most visitors are from the South, but they do come from all over. One day, said one of the ladies-in-charge, there was a visitor from Stockholm, a couple from Bolivia and another from County Cork: "I couldn't understand a word they said," she said of the last couple in her own thick Georgia drawl.

A man who stopped on his way home to Indianapolis from Florida with his wife, a plump woman in the near-uniform of a pastel pantsuit, said he had made the detour because: "We're just interested. He's a very honorable man and he'll be our next president."

"Do you know when Jimmy might be coming?" asked another couple standing on the covered sidewalk, cameras poised. He is not seen much on Main Street these days; his own four-bedroom brick ranch-style house on Woodland Drive, a minute away, is isolated now by a Secret Service barricade.

The ramshackle house of a black family, across the street from Carter was torn down recently and its tenants evicted. There was no indication of Carter having anything to do with it, except involuntarily; it can be supposed that his new eminence created an expectation of higher property values and so spurred the landlord into action.

Plains itself is at least half black. Its school is integrated, but there are no black members of the congregation in the Baptist church where Carter attends services and sometimes teaches an adult Sunday-school class.

The Carters were Plains' great family before Carter achieved his present political eminence, and various members of it own much of what is worth owning — the worm farm, the peanut warehouses and even the town's license to sell beer, held by Carter's convivial brother, Billy, who runs one of the town's two service stations.

Plains lies in southwestern Georgia, 135 miles from Atlanta, the state capital, surrounded by fields of peanuts, soybeans, and corn grown for seed and livestock. The earth is the deep-red clay immortalized by generations of southern novelists, and there are water moccasins in the still brown ponds. The nearest town of any size is Americus and beyond that Albany, both the scenes of bitter racial disturbances in the early 1960s.

The tourists that seem likely to change sleepy Plains into a day-tripper's delight are mostly white, mostly middle-class and proudly "middle-American." For them, Plains seems to be an affirmation of their faith in themselves and their belief that this — not the perils and pleasures of the big cities — represents reality.

For Carter, this dozing hamlet is the perfect background for a man who says he is not of Washington, but who wants very badly to go there.

"You forgot the product label!"

Bell's ice cream ad has a leak

Time tells on long-distance calls

by LEA TONKIN

Telephone calls and ice cream cones have little in common except for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. advertisements comparing their relative costs.

An actual check of the phone company's long-distance rate charts shows the ice cream theory melting away if the call lasts more than a minute or two, or if the caller uses a pay phone.

And sometimes customers will discover it's cheaper to call out-of-state places like Atlanta and Boston than to dial long-distance locations in Illinois such as Carbondale.

Confusion about the multitude of long-distance rates can be costly to consumers. With the assistance of information provided by telephone directories and phone company business office personnel, customers can take advantage of money-saving tips.

An added incentive to check costs for persons who make long-distance calls within Illinois is the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. request before the Illinois Commerce Commission for a 12 per cent long-distance intrastate rate hike as part of a $110 million rate increase package. The first hearing on the utility case is Monday in Chicago.

LONG-DISTANCE RATE information spelled out in the telephone directory shows the dramatic savings for customers who dial calls direct during evening and weekend hours when the rates are reduced, said Merny Miller, an Illinois Bell representative in Arlington Heights.

For example, the first minute of a dial-direct long-distance call to Atlanta from Arlington Heights costs 50 cents for the full weekday rate, 32 cents at the evening rate and 20 cents at the night and weekend discount rate. The Atlanta call, when it's operator assisted, costs $2.05 for a station-to-station, three-minute call and $3.15 for a person-to-person three-minute version.

Callers pay different rates for long-distance connections within the state. Although the lowest priced call from Arlington Heights to Carbondale, could be interpreted as lower per minute than the Atlanta call, the minimum charge is for a two-minute conversation. A two-minute call to Carbondale costs the following: weekday rate, 75 cents; evening rate, 60 cents; night and weekend rate, 45 cents. For operator-assisted, three-minute calls to Carbondale, the Arlington Heights caller pays $1.40 for station-to-station and $2.30 for person-to-person.

Additional charges are levied for each minute the long-distance call exceeds the minimum rate. An obvious cost-cutting step for the customer is short telephone conversations, Mrs. Miller said. In addition to time and distance, taxes increase a customer's bill.

THERE ARE GOOD reasons for higher rates on long-distance calls to some Illinois locations than to out-of-state and the high operator-assisted rates levied on callers from pay phones, said Philip Felice of Central Telephone Co. of Illinois. Felice is division commercial staff supervisor for the utility serving Des Plaines, Park Ridge and other areas.

"The reason why it costs less sometimes out of state than short-haul service in Illinois is because it costs more to provide," Felice said. He said the phone companies strive to base rates on actual cost of service. The operator-assisted rate for pay phone long-distance calls also is justified by the cost of service, Felice said. He said that long-distance calls are optional in comparison to basic telephone service rates, giving the customer a degree of control over cost.

E. C. Hoeppner, general rate supervisor for Illinois Bell, seconds the notion that the phone company must increase rates on discretionary services, such as long-distance calls, to recoup costs. Yet Hoeppner said toll calls not only pay their way, but they also subsidize the basic service rates. The company aims to maintain low basic service rates whenever possible, Hoeppner said.

The Illinois Commerce Commission should force Illinois Bell to offer exact cost of service information and charge accordingly, said Chicago attorney Ellis Levin, who plans to intervene in the utility's pending rate case proceedings. Levin said long-distance callers should not be required to subsidize other services.

Stocks rally behind GM; Dow closes at 970.83

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Motors led a rally that carried prices sharply higher Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange breaking a five-day slump.

The nation's No. 1 automaker sparked a late buying surge by predicting record 1977 industry sales. GM also raised 1977 model prices an average of 5.8 per cent, a trend likely to be followed by other automakers.

The news helped the Dow Jones industrial average, off about three points at the outset, gain 7.90 points to 970.83. The gain snapped five losing sessions in which the average fell 36 points.

GM gained 2¼ to 66. Ford gained 2¼ to 54-3/8 and Chrysler 1 to 20-3/8.

The rally was widespread. The NYSE common stock index gained 0.37 to 54.52 and the average price of a common share increased by 23 cents. Advances topped declines, 810 to 559, among the 1,848 issues crossing the tape.

Volume was 17,400,000 shares, up from 16,740,000 traded Tuesday.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list, up 7/8 to 59½ on 334,400 shares, including a block of 205,000 shares at 58½. AT&T preferred was third, up 5/8 to 63¼ on 212,200 shares with a block of 200,000 shares at 62-5/8.

Federal National Mortgage was the second most active issue, up 5/8 to 16-1/8 on 291,300 shares.

Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased by five cents. Volume totaled 1,919,000 shares, compared with 1,700,000 traded Tuesday.

1977 GM sticker price up by $269

General Motors Corp. touched off a new round of auto price hikes Wednesday with an average $269 increase on the base price of the 1977 model cars already showing up in dealer showrooms. It was the first time in more than a year that the industry leader has boosted sticker prices. GM Chairman Thomas A. Murphy said the 5.8 per cent price increase is justified saying he hopes it will not hurt sales. There was no immediate word from GM's main competitors — Ford, Chrysler and American Motors — on their pricing plans. But all have told dealers that prices will not rise by more than 6 per cent on the new models.

ITT ordered to 'make good'

The Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday it has compelled a 93,000-acre Florida land development owned by ITT to provide a wide range of facilities to make good its claim that buying sites there was a good investment. The commission said International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. and its wholly owned subsidiary, ITT Community Development Corp., have signed a consent order agreeing to halt allegedly unfair and deceptive practices at the Palm Coast development. The 93,000 acres are in eastern Florida between Daytona Beach and St. Augustine. The settlement carries protection for those who bought land at Palm Coast on or after Jan. 1, 1974, against losing all their investments in case of payment defaults.

House-Senate panel mulls tax bill

A House-Senate conference committee moved rapidly through the noncontroversial sections of a major tax bill Wednesday, including more liberal alimony deductions and a four-year extension of the 10 per cent investment tax credit. All controversial matter was passed over as the House and Senate negotiators began the task of reconciling the hundreds of differences in the extensive bills. Deductions for business use of home would be allowed only if the home is the principal place of business or is used to deal with patients, clients or customers in the normal course of business.

Ford to make UAW offer soon

Ford Motor Co. negotiators hinted Wednesday that an economic offer that would shift contract talks with the United Auto Workers into high gear might be placed on the bargaining table next week. The No. 2 automaker must come up with a pattern-setting agreement for the industry's 680,000 workers or face a crippling strike at midnight Sept. 14 when contracts expire. UAW Pres. Leonard Woodcock and Sidney S. McKenna, head of the Ford negotiating team, said there would be no real progress until Ford answered the union's economic demands with proposals of its own.

25% net increase told by Sears

Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago, has reported an increase in net income of 25 per cent to $137 million or 86 cents per share for the second quarter of the current fiscal year compared with $109 million or 70 cents posted for the same period in 1975. Net sales for the second quarter were up 5.8 per cent to $3.5 billion this year compared with $3.13 billion for the corresponding 1975 period. Sears reported net income for the first six months of $222.1 million or $1.40 per share this year compared with $163.7 million or $1.04 per share for the six-month period a year ago. Net sales for the six month period of 1976 were $6.7 billion.

More evidence on what "expert" stock advice is worth

By Donald F. Morton, President
Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

"Listen to this," a friend said, reading from an expensive stock advisory service he had purchased: "Fertilizer supplies are tight, and demand for them is still soaring. It takes a bundle of money and of time (3-5 years) to build fertilizer plants. So for the present and for the near future, fertilizer makers are kings on golden thrones. These companies are harvesting bumper profits — profits rising so fast as to put petroleum companies to shame."

The report went on to recommend one fertilizer company that "the stock market hasn't discovered — Beker Industries."

The date of the report was February 15, 1974. "Now listen to this," he went on, picking up a July 1976 issue of a national financial magazine. After noting that Beker stock, which was selling in the high 20s early in 1975 (up from 20¾ at the time of the report), he read on:

"Then a funny thing happened. Farmers decided they didn't want to plow more into their crops than they would get out, so they cut back fertilizer consumption in 1975. The industry, meanwhile, had put in lots of capacity — and it watched in horror as prices crashed for the second time in a decade."

The result: According to the magazine, Beker lost $4.7 million before taxes in the first quarter of 1976, is badly in need of cash, with heavy inventories and plenty of short- and long-term debt coming due. Its stock was worth less than $9 a share in mid-1976.

The magazine quoted Beker: "I respect the Economists. But I respected them 18 months ago, when they said we were going to have a shortage for the next decade and maybe the rest of the century."

So what do you do with your money to keep it working for you, my friend inquired. We called his attention to a study recently concluded by two University of Chicago professors, funded by the American Bar Foundation, which observed that there is "an impressive amount of evidence that says you can't consistently outperform the market; despite the enormous and costly amount of market analysis now employed, data show that success rests largely on luck."

Since feeling lucky is a fleeting experience for practically all human beings, usually experienced at a race track or crap table, we suggested he would be more prudent to place his savings with us, where he knew his capital would remain intact and its earnings predictable and assured.

Ask Andy

2 kinds of pandas; both from Asia

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Tim Waiter, 10, of Omaha, Neb., for his question:
WHAT IS A PANDA?

Two kinds of Asian animals are named panda, each quite different from the other but both very cuddly looking. One is the giant panda whose furry black and white body has the appearance of a great big stuffed toy. The other is a small reddish-brown panda who is called either a red panda or a lesser panda.

Although the giant panda is like a bear in shape and size and in the ambling, pigeon-toed way he walks, his official classification is not completely agreed on. Most zoologists say the pandas belong in the raccoon family. Some animal experts, however, feel the giant panda belongs in the bear family, and still others maintain he should be in a family of his own.

The giant panda's 200- to 300-pound body is mostly black except for bands of white across the upper part of his legs. His large round head is white with little black ears, black patches around each eye and black on the tip of his nose. He lives in the bamboo forests of the mountains of southeastern China and eastern Tibet. He eats bamboo shoots mainly, but also dines on other plants, fish and small rodents. The mature female usually gives birth once a year to one or two cubs.

THE RED PANDA, or lesser panda, is much smaller than the giant panda, weighing only about 6 to 12 pounds. His two foot-long body sports long, soft fur and a bushy tail with tawny-colored rings around it like a raccoon's. His elfin face is creamy beige with rusty-red streaks curving downward from each eye. Atop his round head are two kittenish ears of soft pale fur, and white whiskers spring out several inches on each side of his button black nose.

The lesser panda is a good climber and spends most of the day sleeping in trees. H also eats bamboo shoots but likes additional treats such as acorns and roots, fish, insects and mice. Although he looks cuddly, he is really shy and hates to be touched.

The giant panda is quite rare and is protected by law in China. The lesser panda, who lives in the same regions, can also be found in Nepal, Sikkim and northern Burma.

The only two giant pandas in the United States live at the National Zoo in Washington, D.C. They were presented to the American people in 1972 by the People's Republic of China. The female, Ling Ling, is about 7 years old now, and Hsing Hsing, the male, is a few months younger. Delighting spectators with their clownish behavior, Ling Ling and Hsing Hsing are a favorite attraction for tourists. Their main diet consists of bamboo and rice gruel, but they relish in-between snacks of apples, bananas and carrots.

WHAT ACCOUNTS FOR THE CAPACITY OF SOILS TO HOLD WATER?

If you were to look at a patch of your skin under a good magnifying glass, you would notice a number of tiny openings. These openings are called pores, and they lead either to sweat glands or to oil glands. Soil also has pores. However, the pores in soil are the empty spaces between the separate particles. And the ability of soil to retain water is directly related to the size and arrangement of its pores.

The texture of soil depends upon the size of the grains that it is composed of. Most soils consist of a mixture of sand, tiny particles of silt and still smaller particles of clay. If the soil is mostly sand, it allows the water to drain right through it. However, it the soil is mostly clay, water may not be able to penetrate it because the particles are so close together. The best type of soil, then, is one that allows water to enter but not drain straight through. Humus, the remains of dead plants and tiny animals, also helps soil retain water by acting as miniblotters, soaking up moisture.

(Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and address to Ask Andy in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.)

Bids that tell a story

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

One of the modern expert developments in bidding is to use the jump to game when a bid of one less than game would be a force. This tells partner that you are well satisfied with the game contract you have bid and want your partner to know that you have little or nothing extra in the way of high cards to tell him about.

Take away his ace of hearts and North would have jumped to four spades. As it was he merely bid three spades to set the suit. South didn't know if North had a good hand or a very bad one so he merely bid four spades. North bid five hearts to show that ace. Whereupon South decided there just might be a grand slam, so he bid six diamonds to show second-round diamond control and grand-slam interest.

This was enough for North. He bid the grand slam.

There was nothing to the play since trumps broke 3-2 and declarer could set up either the fifth diamond or fifth club for his 13th trick.

A new image for mobile homes

by KEN VANDERBECK

The day has come. Mobile-home manufacturers, who once had a poor reputation for building 'shoddy tin boxes,' are now selling nationally guaranteed mobile houses. Plush is in and the tin-pan image is a thing of the past.

Living comfort at lower costs is the goal of the mobile-home business today.

The very name 'mobile home' once was associated with inferior trailer dwellings grouped in tight clusters on cement lots with blaring radios. Now the houses on wheels must be redefined.

"A MOBILE HOME is simply an inexpensive house," a major motorhouse manufacturer recently. said. "A motorhome is an expensive toy."

The manufacturer's statement has some important undertones. Twenty years ago the word 'inexpensive,' when used in reference to mobile homes, usually meant poorly constructed, according to government authorities.

In those days these homes also were the manufacturers' answer for America's less affluent transients. Since the homes provided living quarters and wheels in the same package, they tightened sales competition with apartments.

"Back during World War II this idea of mobile homes for the poor might have been true, but not today," said E. Dean Shipley, director of Woodall's Park Development Service, Highland Park.

"Above-average income persons live here," said Ernest Stavros, manager of Whipple Tree Village Park in Wheeling. "It's not like when transient persons lived in sites like this. Years ago, turnover in parks was enormous, but not now."

MOBILE HOMES have gained respectability after a gradual 20-year process.

Shipley said the "concepts of mobility and custom" have largely influenced the survival of mobile homes. He said certain Americans feel a sense of security knowing they can literally pick up and pull away in their houses if they choose to, even though the trend is to stay put.

Stavros pinpointed this trend. He said mobile homes are becoming less 'mobile' and more 'home,' "We haven't had a 2 per cent turnover in the last four years," he said.

"About eight years ago, owners could move their homes when they wanted to," said attorney Robert D. Wolff of Flossmoor, who has been involved with mobile home law cases. "But since mobile homes are required to be at least 44 feet long, a car can't move them today. So it has to be done professionally."

He said one of the reasons for 'immobility' is that it costs about $200 to move a house 100 miles.

TODAY, WHEN persons move, 95 per cent don't move their house with them," he said.

Wolff said most persons feel secure owning their own land. Owning, rather than leasing land (as in park sites) is the basic concept behind mobile-home subdivisions.

"There are no subdivision sites in this area. They're mostly in the south," Wolff said. "Here, park sites dominate."

Wolf said in the long run there is not much difference between owning and renting, except that renting is a bit cheaper. He warned that buyers should beware of places that don't provide legal leases.

SEVERAL EXPERTS disagree with Wolff about renting costs. They say property ownership offers more benefits in the long run. Shipley said, for instance, that subdivision plot owners share in the profits of land appreciation.

"The property under a rental park appreciates too, but here the tenant shares none of the profits," he said.

Wolff, however, said park tenants gain too. "It's all relative, and it boils down to the type of lifestyle one wants," he said. "In parks, the lessor must provide certain things to the lessee."

He said every park should provide a community house, recreation facilities, pool, and meeting rooms. Streets should be cleaned and utilities should be provided. "From what I've seen, most provide these things," he said.

Wolff said a growing trend is toward mobile condominiums, which are parks where each tenant buys a share of the common area. "When everyone owns a percentage, the park is owned collectively by the tenants," he said.

He also said a continuing trend is for mobile-home sites to be established in semi-rural areas, ouside town zoning limits. "If zoning laws changed so parks didn't become camps, the price of mobile homes might go down," Wolff said.

SHIPLEY SAID a second reason for the popularity of mobile homes is their low cost. "The statistics are proving that mobile homes are becoming more accessible," he said.

ADD SOME LANDSCAPING, a few good-sized trees and flowers, and mobile homes start to look a lot like their more expensive relatives. At Whippletree Village in Wheeling, residents have put a lot of work into making their mobile homes comfortable.

According to Stavros, a single home starts at $13,000, including appliances and furniture. Credit, although expensive, is easy to secure. And once the house is paid for, park rental adds relatively little to the cost, he said.

However, the financial picture isn't completely rosy.

"There is a vast kind of discrimination when housing is involved," Shipley said. "The disparity appears when you see that conventional house owners are given 30-year loans with 7 per cent interest yearly, as compared to 15-year loans at 12 per cent interest for mobile homes."

DESPITE HIGH financing costs, figures show mobile homeowners usually gain in the long run. To begin with, labor constitutes only 12 per cent of the total building costs of a mobile home compared with more than 33 per cent for conventional homes, according to the National Assn. of Home Builders.

And because of new laws, mobile homes are now better constructed. The consumer also is protected against rip-offs.

As of June 15 this year, all mobile homes must comply with federal safety and construction standards. When requirements are met, the state health department places a seal of approval on the model.

"Mobile homes used to be built on state codes and some were good and some were bad," Shipley said. "Now all are built under one HUD (U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development) code. This code is very rigid to insure buyers they're getting a good home."

THE CODE IS administered from the general sanitation offices in the Illinois Dept. of Public Health.

Shortly before the June 15 rule went into effect, sales started picking up where they left off three years ago.

"The big year was 1973, but the recession brought that year's 14,000 mark in Illinois down to 8,400 in 1974," said David Antonacci, plan review engineer of the Illinois general division of sanitation. "The figure will definitely get to about 14,000 again, and the trend is for double-wides."

Double-wides are two single mobile homes placed together horizontally. They are 24 feet wide and singles are 12 to 14 feet wide. The Manufacturers Housing Institute predicts double-wides, which now share 26 per cent of the market, will capture 50 per cent in three years.

STAVROS SAID improvement in construction may reduce depreciation in mobile homes. "We don't have much depreciation here anymore like we used to," he said. "The reason is also due to the good upkeep of the park."

He said improvements in the park sites will also increase the cash value of each house.

Wolff said "mobile home leased land is very akin to the condominium concept. The park owner develops a certain living style."

Wolff said he favors closed sites to open sites. Both are different forms of the basic rental park. "In a closed development the park owner leases to whomever he chooses," he said, noting an owner can use his own discretion in leasing. "In such a park the owner can control the esthetic development of his community more effectively because he knows exactly what kind of persons he's getting."

IN COMPARISON, he said open parks are "usually of lesser quality

New low-cost home easier to own

An innovative new low-cost home introduced on a national scale this month offers new hope to thousands of American families who have seen their dreams of individual home ownership destroyed by high prices.

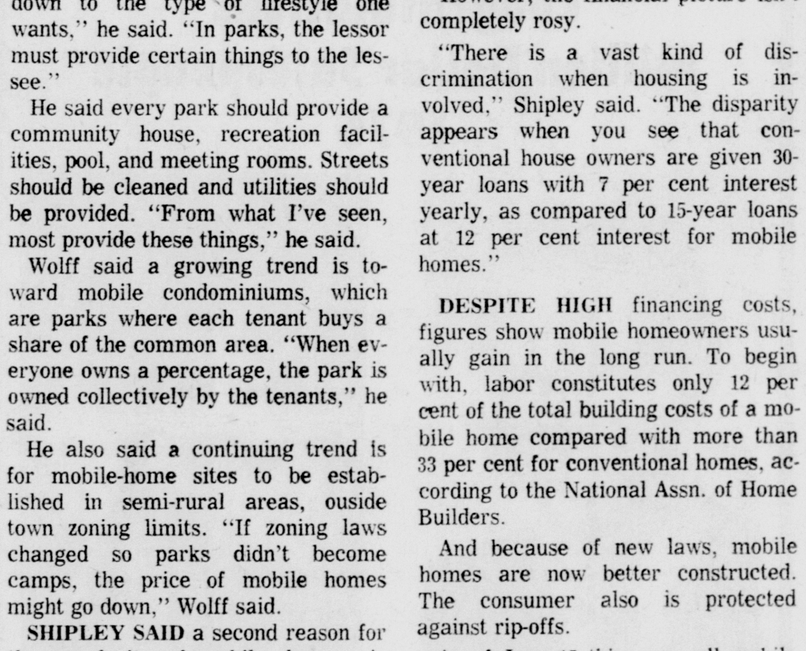
The 1,325-square-foot mobile home which resulted from a year-long project sponsored by Family Circle Magazine contains three bedrooms and a den in addition to a living/dining area, full kitchen, two full bathrooms and a utility room. Complete with furnace, refrigerator, range, carpet, wall finishes and draperies, the home will sell from $21,900 to 24,900, excluding land, depending on location in the United States.

Called the "Family Circle Good Value House," the contemporary style home is the result of a combined development program by Family Circle, Golden West Homes, Vindale Corp., and Armstrong Cork.

THE HOME WILL be built and distributed in the West by Golden West and in the East by Vindale through a network of dealers. Each selected dealer will have a model home duplicating the prototype. Many people in the United Staes will be able to see the home within easy driving distance.

Featuring brand name materials both inside and out, the Good Value House also contains many ideas for do-it-yourself interior design projects to further enhance its value.

Family Circle, which has a long history in family service programs, initiated the project because of increasing concern about thousands of Americans unable to buy single family homes as a result of escalating costs. Only about 15 per cent of American families can now afford new homes which start at an average of about $40,000.



INTERIOR VIEW of the living and dining area of the newly introduced "Family Circle Good Value House." Home includes three bedrooms, two full baths, full kitchen, a den and utility room.

"We wondered if production line techniques could be utilized to produce an attractive home at an affordable price," said Arthur Hettich, editor of Family Circle.

The home will be available for installation in mobile home communities or on private lots where local zoning permits. After ordering, it will be available within a matter of weeks.

THIS HOME will be national feature in the September issue of Family Circle, which is read by more than 17 million adults monthly. In mid-August, when this issue goes on sale, approximately 50 dealers representing both manufacturers will have models of the Family Circle home on display in their area.

The interior was designed and furnished by Virginia Gray of Family Circle and Nancy Wolfgang of Armstrong's Bureau of Interior Design in cooperation with the design groups of both manufacturers.

The exterior, which features full-size windows throughout, recessed entry and rough-sawn exterior siding, was designed to provide an attractive appearance as well as ease of maintenance by Robert Anderson, Family Circle's Special Projects Editor, and a team from Golden West and Vindale.

Among the principal suppliers are Armstrong for floors, ceilings, carpets, and furniture; General Electric for appliances and counter tops; and Masonite for exterior siding.

ALTHOUGH THE base price of the home does not include furniture, most display models will be completely furnished with a similar group. These furnishings may be available at a special package price to consumers.

The furniture group includes Armstrong First Family case pieces, Thomasville case pieces, Flexsteel upholstered furniture, and Tyndale/Cosco accent pieces.

The price of the home, Hettick said, covers everything but the furnishings and includes transporting the home to the site and setting it up.

Partnership pacts can bring headaches

Mr. Meltzer on real estate

by Bernard Meltzer

Many people enter into partnership agreements without considering the long-range effect. Something that seems like a good arrangement today may not seem so good 15 years from now. The following letter from one of my readers is a typical example.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: About 15 years ago a fellow worker and I purchased two lakefront lots in the Pocono Mountain area. At the time, the salesman told us that if we bought the lots as partners and had the deed recorded in both names, we would save money. So we agreed.

The lots were to be paid for in three years in monthly payments. My partner and I made these payments regularly for two years. Suddenly, my partner disappeared into thin air, leaving his job, his wife and child. Not wanting to lose the lots, I made the remaining payments. And I have been paying the taxes ever since.

I am retired now, and would like to build a small bungalow on the ground. But I am hesitant about doing this, due to the deed. I read in the paper several months ago that my partner had died. So my question is, is there an inexpensive and legal way I can get a new deed in my name only?—ONE HALF A TEAM.

Unless you are building your new house for all cash, it will be necessary to have the title to the property put in your name. Mortgage companies will not lend you money if you do not own the entire lot.

If no mortgage is involved, you might want to take a chance that none of your former partner's heirs knew about the lots. This is a pretty big risk, however.

I'm afraid you made a mistake entering into the partnership 15 years ago. A partnership is not something that should be entered into lightly because as many problems can occur in a partnership as in a marriage.

Your best approach is probably to locate the lawyer who is handling your former partner's estate. Contact him and hope you can have the title transferred for a reasonable settlement.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Settlement of our property took place three months ago. The real estate agent handling the repairs was present and quoted a figure for them. The amount was taken out before the checks were distributed.

The other day he called and told me he had made an error in adding his figures, and that I owed him a certain amount of money, even though things were settled three months ago.

I could understand this if he hadn't been able to appear. But he was present, and I don't feel his claim is justified. What do you think?—AM I LIABLE?

Paying bills at a settlement is a convenient way of disbursing money. However, it doesn't eliminate your obligation to pay for repair services that were made on your behalf. If you can prove that the repairs were the obligation of the seller, then you have no responsibility.

However, if the repairs were made on your behalf and simply ordered through the real estate agent, you are responsible. Apparently the real estate broker had misplaced the bills. But after all, real estate brokers, like everybody else, are just people. And all of us make mistakes.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I'm so thrilled! I'm in my very first apartment. I graduated from college last June and finally convinced my parents that it's not unsafe for a young girl to live alone.

Fortunately, I'm pretty handy. I painted the three rooms myself, since the building refused to do it. I did a good job, too.

After the paint dried, I began to think about hanging some paintings on the wall. The first two nails I hammered into the plaster made an awful mess. I was sick! After all, I worked so hard to paint those walls so beautifully. So I haven't tried to hang another picture.

Do you think I'm hammering the nails in wrong? After all, how many ways are there to drive in a nail?—VERY FASTIDIOUS.

I learned the answer to this problem a long time ago. When hammering nails into plaster, heat them first. In that way, they go in without chipping the plaster. If you are doing several, you can actually put them in a pan and heat them over a burner. A single nail can be heated simply by holding it over a flame, but you should use a tweezer or something else to hold it — or you may be burned.

I know this sounds strange, but believe me, it works!

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We kept our aluminum outdoor furniture in the garage all winter. When we took it out and placed it on the terrace, it looked terrible. It's looked that way all summer. It looks old and unattractive, and we bought it only last summer.

Is there anything that can be done to restore its shiny new look?—HATE TO HAVE COMPANY.

It's a simple matter to restore the bright new look of aluminum furniture after it's been shut up all season.

Simply take some kitchen aluminum foil, crumple it and rub all over the aluminum parts. You'll be surprised at how wonderful it will look.

Windmill may be answer to U.S. energy search

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — The age-old windmill, but bigger and more efficient, may be the next development in the search for energy.

Two engineers of the Lockheed-California Corp., conducted a year-long study for the Energy Research and Development Administration and concluded that the building and maintenance of giant windmills will be a major new industry.

Within 20 years, Michael Dubey and Ugo Coty said, thousands of windmills placed around the country could generate enough electricity in the United States to save the equivalent of more than 2 billion barrels of oil a year. But the windmills they have in mind are not the creaking, picturesque types that gave Holland a trademark.

In their paper, "The High Potential of Wind Energy," they discuss large wind turbine generators with rotors up to 350 feet in diameter, roughly the length of a football field with the end zones added.

The rotors look like long airplane propellers. They would probably be made of aluminum and steel and composite materials including glass-reinforced plastic, Dubey said.

Forecasts of energy demand in the United States show a continuously rising trend, Dubey and Coty said in their paper. They cited predictions that by 1995 electrical energy produced and sold by the utilities will reach 6.5 trillion kilowatt hours per year, three times the current amount needed.

"We are presently importing about 40 per cent of our oil needs and selling our heritage at an alarming rate to get it," they said.

Dubey said he sees no paradox in the return to windmills for energy.

During the past 50 years, he said, wind energy has been used to make electricity but the low cost of fossil fuel prevented any serious expansion. Now the cost of fossil fuels is rising, and at the same time there have been advances in materials and design technologies for wind turbines.

"Man has been an energy consumer since he built the first fire to roast a mastodon steak," he said. "At one time he relied on wind. There are reports of windmills as early as the 6th and 7th centuries."

The objectives of the study were to identify areas where high wind conditions are prevalent and the applications of wind energy.

"The answers show that large wind energy conversion systems pay off economically, and that a major new industry is about to blossom in our midst," Dubey and Coty wrote.

In the study, wind data was gathered from more than 700 observation stations across the county. Annual wind power densities were found as high as 619 watts per square meter in some areas along the Oregon coastline and higher at Sandberg, Calif. The measurements were equivalent to a wind speed of 18 miles per hour.

But if only two per cent of the area studied had winds of 15.7 miles per hour, then 20,000 square miles would be available for wind turbines, they said. The turbine chosen as a model for their study was the two-bladed rotor on a horizontal axis. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is testing a 125-foot diameter windmill at Sandusky, Ohio.

Prior to World War II, they said, a larger turbine, 1,250 kilowatts and 175 feet in diameter, was used to deliver energy into the utility power lines in Vermont.

They found that utilities would be the largest users with windmills as a supplement to other generating equipment, but nuclear and fossil fuel plants would remain the basic generating sources in the United States.

Dividing the country into nine regions they calculated the cost of energy for each region. In some areas, they said, wind energy would be cheaper now than fossil fuel energy.

But by 1995, wind energy will be cheaper than other sources because of the rising cost of fuel.

Rubloff sells industrial site to Far-Best

Arthur Rubloff & Co. has negotiated the sale of a 35,000 sq. ft. industrial structure at 1401 Greenleaf, Elk Grove Village to Far-Best Inc.

The facility, located on a 100,000 sq. ft. site, has 18 ft. ceilings, is fully air conditioned, and has four truck loading docks.

LaSalle National Bank, Trustee, sold the property to Far-Best Inc. for approximately $500,000.

Far-Best Inc., a Los Angeles-headquartered industrial detergent manufacturing firm, is expanding its operations in Elk Grove Village. They have additional facilities at 2500 Lunt, in Elk Grove Village.

2nd highest since 1950s

12% hike told in VA home loans

Activity in the Veterans Administration's home loan guaranty program during fiscal year 1976 was the second highest since the peak years of the mid-1950s, the agency has reported.

More than 617,800 appraisal requests were received during the 12-month reporting period, the fifth highest total in the program's 32-year history. The 178,096 requests received during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1976 was the highest quarterly figure since the final three months of fiscal 1972.

Loan applications were up 12 per cent over the previous year, the nearly 379,000 applications presenting the program's sixth highest fiscal year total. The 39,970 home loan applications in June was the highest monthly total since August 1972.

More than 9.3 million veterans have borrowed $122.9 billion under the VA Loan Guaranty Program since it was established in 1944. The guaranty is a substitute for investment protection sought by lenders through substantial downpayments and shorter terms in making convenional mortgage loans.

There is no limitation on the amount of a loan eligible for guaranty, except that for home loans the amount of the loan may not exceed the reasonable value of the property as established by the VA.

VA officials said there is no VA requirement for a downpayment if the purchase price or cost does not exceed the reasonable value, but the lender may require one. However, if the purchase price or cost is more than the reasonable value as determined by the VA, the difference must always be paid in cash from the veteran's own resources.

The VA guarantees part of the veteran's loan, up to 60 per cent or a maximum of $17,500.

Enactment of the Veterans Housing Act of 1976 on July 1 increased the guarantee on mobile home loans to 50 per cent of the loan amount. Unchanged was the maximum loan amount of $12,500 for a single-wide unit and $20,000 for a double-wide unit.

The high level of home loan activity has been spurred by a series of legislative changes since 1970, aimed at liberalizing eligibility requirements.

The Veterans Housing Act of 1970 removed the delimiting date on VA home loans. Another law, enacted in 1974, made it possible for veterans who have used their loan to regain entitlement, provided the veteran has disposed of the property and the loan has been paid in full.

Requests for restoration of entitlement soared to 16,832 in fiscal 1976 from 7,213 in the previous year.

Entitlement also may be restored if another credit-worthy veteran assumes the balance on the VA loan and substitutes his own entitlement. Approval was granted 2,639 of 2,902 requests for substitution of entitlement received in fiscal 1976.

The 1976 legislation extended home loan eligibility for the first time to veterans whose active duty occurred after July 25, 1947 and prior to June 27, 1950. Effective Oct. 1, an estimated 250,000 peacetime veterans will become eligible for VA home loans.

Other new eligibles will be unmarried surviving spouses of veterans who served during this time, if the veteran died while on active duty during this period or as a result of service-connected disability.

They join similar spouses of veterans with other service dates since World War II. Spouses of active-duty military members who are listed as missing in action also are eligible for VA home loan benefits.

Housing aid plan expanded by U.S.

A wider range of lower income families is now eligible to benefit under the Section 235 homeownership assistance program of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This has been made possible under the Housing Authorization Act of 1976, recently signed by President Ford, and HUD instructions to field offices calling for acceptance of applications under terms of the new law.

Changes in two areas of the program open the way to wider participation.

One change raises the eligible income ceiling from 80 per cent of median family income in an area to 95 per cent. The actual income limits will vary significantly by market area.

The second change recognizes rising costs and raises the mortgage limits for home purchases with Section 235 assistance. These mortgage limits have been increased to $25,000 ($29,000 for a family of five or more), and in designated high cost areas to $29,000 ($33,000 for a family of five or more).

The revised Section 235 program is presently limited to single family homes which are newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated. However, the just-enacted legislation also provides for Section 235 assistance in the purchase of mobile homes for lower income families. HUD is now preparing guidelines for implementation of this feature of the program.

Under program procedures, an eligible family make a 6 per cent downpayment and pays 5 per cent interest on the FHA insured mortgage loan, using at least 20 per cent of its adjusted gross income. The Government makes up the difference to the lender between the monthly payment at 5 per cent interest and at the FHA interest rate prevailing at the time of the home purchase.

Long use of road proves access

by Don G. Campbell

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We have a piece of property which is off a main highway and has been in the family since 1916 or '17. The ground belonged to my parents and they maintained the road for all those years. I purchased the property from them and have built a home. We have since taken care of the same road. It is a dead end and we have no other way in.

Recently a piece of property was sold to someone and this road goes through that property. Can this person stop us from using this road, or close it off so we cannot get to our home? I'm really concerned as we are in our 60s and really don't know what to do if this person should block the road for us. — Mrs. A. K. (Tamaqua, Penn.)

ANSWER: Don't worry your head about it. The mere existence of the road over many years establishes it quite clearly as your legal means of access. This is known as "easement by prescription" which means that your right to the roadway "is acquired by open, exclusive, and continued use over a period of time, varying from 10 to 20 years, depending on applicable statutory or common state law."

And, from a more immediate and practical standpoint, it seems logical that the new property owner sized up the situation, made inquiries about it and realized — before he agreed to the sale — that there was no way he could block you off.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

My husband and I are in our late 20s and both of us work teaching. Our combined salaries are about $23,000 a year.

We have been househunting and have found one that we want to make a bid on. This is a $40,000 house and we can put $10,000 down. Here's the problem: a friend tells us that we won't be able to qualify for a mortgage because the lender will only take my husband's salary into account since I am of child-bearing age. His salary is $12,000 a year.

Is this true? We don't intend to have any children for at least five or six years and, even then, I will still continue working. Don't they take this into account? — Mrs. W. B. M. (Philadelphia, Pa.)

ANSWER: The lender's going to have to come up with a better excuse than this to disqualify you for a mortgage since he can no longer, legally, disregard the wife's contribution to the family exchequer. Prior to 1974, it was common practice to strike out the wife's income in such considerations.

But lifestyles have changed and the law, belatedly, recognizes it. At the same time, you'd better be quite sure, in your own minds that both of you intend to keep working. The payments, principal and interest, on a $30,000 mortgage (at 8½ per cent for 30 years) wouldn't be impossible on your husband's salary alone, (about $234 a month), but it would be a bit snug.

In five years we would hope that his income — should you change your mind about continuing to work — would make it a more comfortable "fit." I don't see that you have any problem.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We have been in our present home about 10 years and are now getting ready to sell it because my husband has been transferred to the west coast.

In getting the house ready to sell we have a running argument on one point: my husband wants to add a swimming pool to increase the salability of the house. I say that's silly. Who's right? — Mrs. P. L. (Phoenix, Az.)

ANSWER: I hate to get embroiled in these family "discussions," but in this case I have to take your side. A swimming pool represents a major improvement and there's not a prayer that you would be able to command a selling price high enough to offset its cost.

Paint up, fix up . . . spend a little money getting the yard looking nice, but don't get into big projects like this. An existing pool undoubtedly reflects a higher price for house "A" than it does for house "B" — identical, but without a pool. But the difference will never offset the cost of adding this feature.

There are also a whale of a lot of people who wouldn't be caught dead owning a pool.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

JERRY BOUSCHARD

The young, newly-married couple typically starts out in a rented apartment. There are good reasons for doing so, but, at some point, a move into a home of their own makes more sense. For one thing, apartment rents are high and climbing and the typical apartment space gets smaller with passing years.

Inflation also raises the cost of homes for sale, so waiting can be costly. The payments made when buying a house are a form of forced savings. A part of each payment goes to build up the equity of the owner. And, home owners can deduct mortgage interest and property taxes from their income tax.

Downtown jobs, services key to mass transit: study

NEW YORK (UPI) — A $165,000 study of America's troubled cities says people will not make adequate use of mass transit unless jobs and services are available in downtown areas.

"The most important step for encouraging use of public transportation is to concentrate jobs and services in compact downtowns," the Regional Plan Assn. said in a study.

"America's basic transit problem is not technology but arranging activities so people can ride together."

John P. Keith, president of the association, said "The increasing national and local dollars invested in transit could be wasted if business and government continue to locate offices and universities on their own broad campuses, department stores in shopping centers away from the offices and small firms along the highways in between."

A spokesman for the association, William B. Shore acknowledged that it will be necessary "to turn around society's way of looking at the city" before new downtown concentrations become possible.

"You're going to have to solve the city problems which result in companies arriving at the very subjective decision that they should move out of the city," Shore said. "You're going to have to make it more desirable to keep jobs and services in the downtown area."

The study, financed by the U.S. Urban Mass Transportation Administration and the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations, said the second best step for encouraging mass transit would be "to increase the density of neighborhoods near the downtown, especially around existing or potential bus or rail stops."

It also showed that if the number of transit riders all over the nation were doubled, "auto use in urban areas would diminish by only a few per cent. So, better transit does little to take cars off the road."

The study was primarily based on data gathered from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Numbers of both keep rising

Home prices don't deter buyers

On one hand you read that housing prices are getting so high that most Americans can't afford to buy a home of their own. On the other hand you read about real estate companies reporting record sales of homes. What's going on?

"There's no contradiction," reports Robert G. Walters, senior vice president of Baird & Warner, Inc., and general manager of the company's residential sales division. "Home prices are going up. But at the same time, more and more people are concluding that a home is a worthwhile purchase, so they are putting a home at the top of their 'most wanted' list, even if that means cutting down on other things.

He pointed to figures of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board which show that the average purchase price of an existing home in the Chicago metropolitan area for the second quarter of 1976 was $50,200, an 11.30 per cent increase over the $45,100 average price reported for the same period in 1975.

During the same three months in 1976, Baird & Warner's 31 Chicago area offices participated in 1,304 residential sales, a 22 per cent increase over the 1,071 home sales participations in those three months in 1975.

The appeal of owning your own home, be it a single-family home, townhouse, or condominium, is obviously continuing to grow despite the cost. According to a recent Wall Street Journal article, two-thirds of U.S. families own their homes, and this proportion has been increasing over the years. Whereas previously home-buying was confined to families, greater numbers of single adults are now buying homes.

Among the 16 million married couples 25 to 34 years old, about six million, or 37 per cent, own their homes and 4½ million more, or 28 per cent, are actively seeking to buy, the Journal notes.

Walters believes several factors account for the ability of buyers to ante up for the higher price of homes:

First, personal incomes are higher, even after inflation is taken into account. More important, many people expect their incomes to continue to go up. One economic survey source predicts personal income will go up 5 per cent in the third quarter of 1976 and rise another 5.6 per cent in the final quarter.

"In fact, Walters said, "housing costs have increased less than personal incomes. Chicago Title Insurance Company reports that between 1970 and 1975, per capita disposable income was up 50 per cent while housing costs, including purchase price, taxes, mortgage interest, and upkeep, rose 40 per cent. So housing remains a bargain, even at higher prices."

Second, working wives make it possible for many families to afford a house. In earlier days, a wife's income wasn't counted in figuring a family's ability to buy a house. Today it is. Many young married women are postponing child-bearing so they can remain at work and help pay for the house; or returning to work when children are of school age.

Third, people are cutting back on other expenses. Vacations, clothing, expensive cars, entertainment, eating out, and similar expenses are being scaled down to make it possible to spend more for a house.

"A house is something you can live with forever, so why not make it a good one? That's what many people think," Walters said. "A vacation or a night out is here today and gone tomorrow. A house makes more sense."

Then, of course, there are the traditional advantages of owning a home which to many people are stronger today than ever before. Walters includes:

• Inflation hedge. A house is one of the few items that increase in value over the years; at least, that's been the historic experience. As prices rise, so does the value of the house in most cases. In fact, during the past 10 years, house prices have almost doubled, while the cost of living went up 66 per cent and the Standard and Poor stock index rose 1.06 per cent.

• Build-up of equity. A portion of each monthly payment made by a homeowner goes to increase his own equity in the house. In effect, the owner is paying himself back and has money to show for it when the house is fully paid up. This is unlike rent, all of which goes to the landlord.

• Tax advantages. The homeowner can deduct mortgage interest and real estate taxes when he computes his federal and state income taxes, in effect reducing his taxes and lowering the net cost of home ownership.

• Credit rating. Home owners who faithfully meet their monthly payment obligations find they have substantial credit ratings, an important consideration in times of need.

• Privacy and freedom. A home usually gives the owner complete privacy and the freedom to do what he wants, without seeking permission from a landlord.

• Financial independence. Once a home is bought and paid for, it substantially contributes to the independence of the family. This is an important consideration in later years, especially after retirement.

• Pride of ownership. This is perhaps the strongest inducement and is a good part of the American Dream. Whether it's a single-family house, a townhouse, or condominium, a home that's owned by the family that lives in it conveys a certain sense of accomplishment.

Mortgage associations add $900 million in home loans

The Federal National Mortgage Assn. and the Government National Mortgage Assn. have announced an agreement for FNMA to purchase an additional $900 million in conventional home mortgage loans from GNMA.

David M. deWilde, president of GNMA, said that the new purchase increases the total amount of below-market interest rate mortgages sold this year by GNMA under its various disposition programs to $6.3 billion. Of that amount, more than $3.6 billion were conventional mortgages purchased by GNMA under the emergency housing legislation initially passed in October, 1974.

Mortgages purchased for GNMA by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation represent $700 million of the mortgages to be sold to FNMA in the new transaction. The yield on these mortgages will be 9.125 per cent.

The remaining $200 million will be mortgages purchased for GNMA by FNMA and will be sold at a yield of 9.1025 per cent.

DeWilde said the average yield of 9.12 per cent for the entire transaction compares favorably to the current yield offered under both phases of the GNMA/FHLMC Portfolio Sale Program and to the average yield of all conventional mortgages sold to date by GNMA.

He said sales activity under both Phase I and Phase II of the GNMA/FHLMC Portfolio Sale Program would be continued until further notice.

FNMA will make a cash deposit of $900 million for the mortgages and the amount of the unpaid principal balance of the mortgages to be purchased will be adjusted to take into account the discount and accrued interest at the time of delivery.

Contest scheduled at trade show

For the first time in five years, the Home and Apartment Exposition will present awards to exhibitors at its October show at the O'Hare Exposition Center in Rosemont.

The awards concept was developed by an exhibitors' advisory committee, formed to work with exhibitors on making the show exciting enough to get and keep the attention of builders and architects at this and future shows.

During the months prior to the show, exhibitors have been meeting regularly with each other and the advisory committee to discuss ways of making individual booths as well as the entire exhibit hall a cohesive and attractive atmosphere. As further inducement to exhibitors to contribute to this atmosphere through their own displays, it was decided that awards would be given to the most deserving booths.

During the two-day show on October 6 and 7, the judging arm of the committee will travel about the exhibit hall inspecting exhibits in search of three "award winners." There will be one category of judging, which will take into consideration the following points: outstanding utilization of all space areas (floor, walls, air, etc.); suitability to the show's specific shelter-industry audience: fresh, neat, eye-catching appearance of booth: good sponsor identification: pleasant use of graphics. Lighting, color, textures: astute handling of traffic circulation: good attitude and aptitude of staff manning booth: clarity of product message and use: availability of product information for follow-up. Extra points will be given for the unusual, clever or original.

For further information contact Judy McElhatton, Expo Headquarters — 751-1075.

Private home loan industry issues brochure

The role and magnitude of the growing private mortgage insurance industry in making home ownership available for thousands of moderate-income families who could not otherwise afford it are outlined in a brochure issued by the Mortgage Insurance Companies of America.

By insuring the top 20 per cent or 25 per cent of a conventional mortgage, private mortgage insurance companies (MICs) enable lenders to make loans to home seekers with as little as a 5 per cent downpayment. This is an important factor for many would-be purchasers with a steady income and potential, but whose ready funds may have been depleted by inflation, said John C. Williamson, Washington, D.C., Executive Vice President of MICA, the industry trade association.

The magnitude of the industry, unrealized by many, is illustrated by the facts presented in the brochure that in 1974 and 1975 MICs insured mortgages on 652,571 homes in the amount of more than $19 billion, 44.7 per cent more than the combined total of single-family programs of the Federal Housing Administration.

The federal government's exclusive role in the insurance of residential mortgages was ended in 1957 with the creation of the first non-government mortgage insurance company. The pamphlet lists the members of MICA, their principal and underwriting offices, and the committees of the Association.

"Unlike the FHA, which insures 100 per cent of the principal amount due on a mortgage, MICs insure only the top 20 per cent or 25 per cent of the mortgage, depending on the ratio of loan to value and the coverage desired by the lender who shares the risk with the MIC," said the brochure. The co-insurance feature has enabled MICs to provide their insurance at approximately one-half the cost of the FHA, said Mr. Williamson, who added that faster processing than FHA is another positive element offered by MICs.

Presently there are 13 private mortgage insurance companies in business chartered by at least one state, and several of these are engaged in insuring residential mortgages on a national scale, declares the new directory. Of these 13, 10 have been approved by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation and the Federal National Mortgage Association as qualified insurers of mortgages eligible for purchase from lenders in the secondary market operated by these two corporations.

Through such purchase of mortgages on the strength of the MIC insurance, FHLMC and FNMA replenish the funds of local savings and loan associations, banks, and mortgage bankers, thus enabling them to make additional loans to home buyers.

Beware of the three-leaf demon

Poison ivy is an attractive plant found generally in the eastern half of the United States and Canada. It has three large shiny leaflets ranging from two to four inches in length. These are pointed at their tips. The edges of the leaflets may be smooth or irregularly toothed. In the fall the leaves turn from green to vivid reds and yellowish reds and at this time are most beautiful.

The flowers of poison ivy are small and green, borne in heads measuring from one to three inches in diameter. Poison ivy fruit appears in clusters of small, hard, round white berries.

This plant varies considerably in its habit of growth, rooting characteristics, leaves and fruit. Sometimes it appears as a shrub but more often as a vine. Basically it is as described here.

There is no part of poison ivy that does not contain the non-volatile oil that causes painful itching and blistering when it touches human skin. If you have poison ivy on your property and decide to cut and burn it, be very careful not to stand where the smoke can reach you. Even the smoke can have harmful effects. Should you come in contact with poison ivy and experience the itching that accompanies such contact, you would be well advised to see a doctor at once.

You may wonder what such an undesirable plant has to do with your landscape: just this, it pops up in the most unusual places. Sometimes it can be found climbing on trees and fences in cities. In suburban and rural areas it often grows lush in wooded places and escapes into gardens. Because of this, you should be thoroughly familiar with it for your own protection. And, if you have children, you should show them, at an early age, how to identify poison ivy and instruct them not to touch it.

A common native vine you might confuse with poison ivy is the Virginia creeper. You can find this in woodlands and it, too, turns red in the fall but it has five leaflets. Always remember that poison ivy has three leaflets.

Q. Do peonies need winter protection?

A. Not generally, but it is advisable to mulch them with a light covering of straw or leaves for protection during the first winter they are in the ground.

Q. When is the best time to use an oil spray on shrubs?

A. Between January and March — but only when temperatures are above 45 degrees F.

Arlington advances the easy way—by forfeit!

Special to the Herald

W. LaFAYETTE, Ind. — The Arlington Heights American Legion baseball team opened "play" in the Regional Tournament here Wednesday by defeating Michigan's state champion on a forfeit.

The forfeit, caused by discovery of an ineligible player on the Michigan roster, sends Arlington Heights into a second-round game today at 5 p.m. The opponent will be the winner of the Kokomo (Ind.) vs. Columbus (Ohio) game, scheduled for late Wednesday.

"We're pleased to get the win," said Arlington Heights coach Lloyd Meyer. "Of course, we wanted to play the game, but if anybody was going to benefit from this forfeit, I'm glad it was us."

Meyer had been saying all week that he knew next to nothing about the Michigan representative. He especially didn't know they had an ineligible player.

"When we got here we had heard that there was one player in question in the tournament," Meyer said. "But we didn't know what team he was on — we didn't know he was on the team we were supposed to open up against."

Meyer admitted that the American Legion eligibility rules are "sticky" and he affirmed his belief that the rules should be enforced. But he added that an incident such as the one Wednesday would give the Michigan Legion a "black eye" and would be bad for Legion ball in general.

"We had no idea they would disqualify the whole team," said Meyer. "We figured they'd just make that one player ineligible. But the rules are pretty strict."

The forfeit victory gives Arlington Heights a decided edge over the remaining five teams in the regional.

"It's a big advantage for us," Meyer conceded. "I've been saying all along that we don't have the big ace pitcher. We've got three good pitchers of equal talent who can all win, but we don't have that one stopper like most teams have.

"Now the other teams will have to use up their aces and we'll be able to take advantage of our depth and balance," continued Meyer. "The big game for us now is the second game. Naturally, they're all big but that second game is especially important."

The Arlington coach has nominated Kevin McBride to pitch the opener, now set back to this afternoon. He'll go with Rob Huber after that and then Dennis Drolet.

"McBride's pitched three straight shutouts or near-shutouts," said Meyer. "He's earned the starting assignment. If he can come up with a big ball game, it'll really help stimulate us."

Meyer's team had set out to take batting practice Wednesday morning at Purdue University when Meyer learned of the forfeit. The easy victory, the 45th of the season in 53 games for Arlington Heights, was the team's 10th in a row since a loss to Logan Square in the Ninth District Tournament four weeks ago.

Meyer, a seasoned vet, will take them any way he can get them.

Today's game will be broadcast live on WWMM-FM (92.7) at 5 p.m.

There's something for everybody here

A blast furnace mouth opening wide in the 1960s, consuming all that was false in the sports world.

The word "outspoken" seemed invented just for this sports commentator. He used big words in his "Tell it like it is" style. People loved to hate him.

If Howard Cosell had a fan club then, I would have joined. His style was refreshing in an era of wishy-washy television sports commentators.

At some point in the 1970s, he began turning me off. Cosell started taking himself too seriously. He began acting like his presence alone was more important than the event he was covering.

However, last Saturday he was the Howie of old. He appeared live on Wide World of Sports to cover a tennis match involving Dr. Renee Richards.

Renee Richards Howard Cosell Woody Hayes

Unless you've been locked in a closet the past week, you've heard of Dr. Richards. She used to be a he. A transsexual.

Cosell handled this interview impeccably. He asked tough questions with sensitivity. He was brilliant.

Although embroiled in this latest sports controversy of whether she should be allowed to play with women in the U.S. Open next month, Dr. Richards was at ease with this master interviewer. Viewers found her to be a very intelligent, very intense and very decent person.

Old Howie may still turn me off when his ego blocks out what's happening on the tube. But when it comes to handling such touchy sports subjects, I can't imagine anyone else doing a better job.

Obviously, you can't judge a person by one interview. But I came away from Cosell's talk with Dr. Richards feeling that she should be allowed to play against women.

Although she's tall at 6-foot-2, she's lost over 40 pounds since her sex-change operation. Dr. Richards no longer has the power she once had in her serve.

In a match with a no-name player, she struggled to win. If tourneys allow her to compete against women, she won't dominate them.

A happy man called The Herald Monday. Larry Adelman had scored his first hole-in-one while playing the very demanding par 3, 235-yard eighth hole at Old Orchard Country Club.

That's quite a poke, almost all over water. But Dennis Luke might not be impressed.

Luke broke the national record for the longest ace by a man last week on his hometown course in Lena, Ill. Are you ready for this?

The 28-year-old golfer rifled his drive into the cup from 364 yards out! He aced a par 4! And it wasn't a dogleg shortcut shot either!

"The more I think about it, the more excited I get," said Luke of his tape measure shot.

The Lena Golf Club's third hole runs downhill, becoming level beyond a creek almost 100 yeards from the green. Luke, who averages 250 to 300 yards off the tee, carried the creek on the fly.

"We knew the ball should be in the middle of the fairway," Luke recalled. "We kept looking and looking . . ." Another group played through as Luke searched for his ball. They found it in the cup.

Luke's shot breaks the 1975 national mark for 360 yards (according to Golf Digest's record) held jointly by two golfers.

If you're wondering, the record for women is held by Tillie Gondak — 230 yards.

A couple of weeks ago, Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes revealed that he was the one who turned in Michigan State for rule violations.

Since I'm a graduate of a consistent Big 10 loser, an evil thought entered my mind. The Iowas of the conference could have a chance if someone would blow the whistle on Ohio State and Michigan.

Human nature being what it is, these two powerhouses must be doing something wrong. If some loser school had a wealthy alumnus who could hire some investigators . . .

Sounds like a low-down dirty trick, doesn't it? I know, I know. But how would you like suffering through 15 years of mediocre to poor showings?

When your alma mater has a 42-103-5 record and when Penn State, Southern Cal and Ohio State are on this year's schedule, you get a little desperate.

All the suggestions for naming the Logans' Cairn terrier are in.

Among the long list were such offbeat ideas like Nagol (Logan spelled backwards), Chuncy, Castle (?) and Phoebe.

One woman caller insisted we had her terrier. Even though I mentioned that our dog's listed birth date occurred before she ever lost her Cairn, she was convinced. She just wished me luck and was happy her lost dog (she purchased another Cairn since) had a good home.

All the calls and comments were appreciated. We decided on the name Mini.

By the way, Mini appreciates all the suggestions, too.

Veteran star enters 16th Paddock tennis tournament

by ART MUGALIAN

John Clark has possession of the Ogden Bowl, the Paddock Tennis Tournament has John Clark, and all is right with the world.

Clark, the 57-year-old former amateur star who lives in Arlington Heights, recently retired after 28 years with the Hartford Insurance Group. His retirement gift was the Ogden Bowl, a trophy that Clark had won twice more than 30 years ago. But he never expected to see it again.

"I was surprised to see it," said Clark, who won the Ogden Park Tennis Tournament in Chicago back in 1938 and 1941. "I never did have possession of it — they kept it on display in the park's showcase. If I had won the tourney one more time I could have retired the Bowl."

The tourney was discontinued during the war and never resumed and the Ogden Bowl disappeared from sight. No one had seen it for 30 years, but Clark's boss at Hartford, W. Melvin Timmons, conducted an exhaustive search and finally found the Bowl in a South Side basement.

Timmons, a former tennis star himself, is the father of Mel Timmons of Hoffman Estates, the coordinator for the 16th Annual Paddock Tennis Tourney, Sept. 4-6.

Clark, a past champion of the Paddock Tourney, will again be entered in the senior vets singles and doubles divisions. And he again will be the No. 1 seed, or close to it.

Last year Clark lost in the finals of the senior vets singles to Jack Laffey. He and doubles partner Steve Morgan were eliminated in an early round when Clark suffered a cramp in his

Burris, Madlock riddle Astros

In the heat of the National League batting title that includes no less than a half-dozen candidates, Cub Bill Madlock coolly stroked his 13th home run and league-leading 32nd double to personally ice a 5-1 triumph over the Houston Astros.

The pair of extra-base blasts in four trips accounted for four runs batted in for the defending batting champ and inflated his season's average to .336, second only to Philadelphia's Jay Johnstone with a .345 mark.

Beneficiary of Madlock's continued offensive assault was Ray Burris who has unraveled a hot streak of his own.

Burris cruised the distance for the sixth time by scattering seven hits, walking only one and fanning four to raise his record to 11-12 after a disastrous 1-7 start.

In evening the Houston series at one game apiece, Burris' only serious mistake came in the sixth inning when he fed a fastball to Cesar Cedeno who promptly deposited it on the leftfield catwalk for his 17th home run of the season. The error cost the righthander a shutout.

The Cubs were already in command, though, as they pasted Houston starter Dan Larson for all five runs on five hits in the opening two innings.

Rick Monday, stationed in an unfamiliar position at first base on defense, opened the game for the Cubs by reaching second on an error by Houston first sacker Bob Watson.

One out later, Madlock lost a 1-1 pitch in the leftfield bleachers to provide Burris with all the support he would have needed.

Although the Cubs wasted a triple by Pete LaCock later in the inning, they returned to the scoring column in the second and Madlock was again the ringleader.

After George Mitterwald struck out for the first of three times, Mick Kelleher singled in the infield, Burris sacrificed him to second and Monday walked.

Jose Cardenal followed with a run-scoring base hit to center before Madlock sprayed a two-run double down the chalk line in right.

Joe Niekro and Gilbert Rondon combined to blank the Cubs on five hits the rest of the way, but Burris had much more than he needed including the encouragement of the 8,770 fans in attendance.

The two clubs will play the decisive game of the series today at 1:25 p.m. with Rick Reuschel slated to oppose J. Rodney Richard for the Astros.

'Bird' proves unflappable in win

From Herald Wire Services

DETROIT — The Chicago White Sox saw "The Bird" Wednesday.

And Mark Fidrych, Detroit's hyped-up rookie pitcher, responded to the meeting by riveting another spike into his "Phenomenon of the Year" bid before a typically enormous crowd of supporters here at Tiger Stadium, winning 3-1.

"Eight other guys should be out here with me," the curly-topped Motor City saint panted after returning to the field following the game. He was back out of necessity . . . for an interview and for the safety of the iron girders at the park that surely would have been torn down had he decided not to encore.

Fidrych fiddles on the mound and the audience loves it. So do the vendors outside the stadium who hawk

Big Bird dolls straight out of Sesame Street. And so does Tiger management as they listen to the turnstyles hum and the long green drop — he's drawn no less than 30,000 for any of his 14 starts on Detroit turf.

Wednesday there were just under 40,000 on hand and Fidrych sent them home happy (after his curtain call) by spinning a five-hitter to up his won-loss record to 15-5 and lower his circuit-leading ERA to 2.11. The only Chicago run was unearned, coming off an error by Ben Oglivie in right on Jerry Hairston's two-out single after Jack Brohamer had led off the fifth with a base hit.

The tally forged a 1-1 stalemate at the time but Oglivie was quick to make amends. He tripled off the center field wall in the sixth and kept right on trucking when the relay throw in was misplayed by Al Banister. Detroit came up with an insurance run off Sox starter Bart Johnson in the same inning on Rusty Staub's walk, Jason Thompson's single and a sacrifice fly to center by Aurelio Rodriguez.

Rodriguez also drove in Detroit's initial run in the fourth, singling up the middle after Thompson had singled to left with two away and then stole second.

Fydrich logged only one strikeout but he retired the last 13 batters he faced in order to finish on a strong note and then dashed around to personally thank everyone of his teammates on the field. Then the personable rightly disappeared into the dugout. But unlikely Wrigley Field or White Sox Park where crowds race for the exits, nearly every Tiger fan stayed to chant for "The Bird."

"Hey, the Red Sox didn't want me," Fydrich replied in the interview to a question about being overlooked in his Massachusetts hometown. Believe it or not, baby, you're wanted in Detroit.

Bulls sign Badger

The Chicago Bulls Wednesday named Ed Badger head coach of their National Basketball Association Team. He has previously been an aide to former coach Dick Motta.

An announcement from Arthur M. Wirtz, chairman of the Bulls' executive committee, said Badger, 43, was signed to a multiyear contract. Terms of the contract were not released.

A 1953 graduate of the University of Iowa, where he earned two letters in basketball, Badger coached et Iowa City St. Mary's High School until coming to Chicago in 1959 as head coach at Wilbur Wright (junior) College. He had a 352-110 record at Wilbur Wright.

Badger has been a member of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee and was one of the coaches which selected this year's gold medal United States team at the 1976 Olympics. He was assistant coach of the 1970 World University Games team, and in 1974 was head coach of the team which won a gold medal in Moscow with a 21-0 mark.

Badger joined the Bulls on a part-time basis in December, 1973, as assistant coach and head scout, and after the 1974-75 season he gave up his coaching and athletic director's duties at Wright to become a full-time aide to Motta. He is a native of West New York, N.J.

Badger is in Los Angeles coaching the Bulls' entry in the Southern California summer pro league.

"We'll present an exciting, hustling team that comes to play every night," the Bulls announcement quoted him as saying.

3 area golfers still alive

FRANKFORT — Three area golfers were among 40 still alive after two rounds of the 46th annual Illinois State Amateur golf championship here Wednesday.

Dick VanDerSande of Schaumburg zipped around the par 72 Prestwick country club course in one-under figures to tie with four others two strokes behind pace-setting Mark Wagner of Rockford.

The 16-year-old Wagner followed up his torrid opening round 68 with a 73 Wednesday to become the youngest golfer ever to lead the tourney after 18 holes. VanDerSande joined with the defending champ, Mike Soli of DeKalb, Joel Hirsch of Chicago and Northbrook entries Tom Evans and Phil Kenny at 141.

The original field of 12 was trimmed to 30 plus ties for the final two rounds Thursday. Also making the cutoff point of 150 were Scott Burkhardt of Arlington Heights (71-73—144) and Tom Jacobsen of Schaumburg (74-74-148). Meanwhile Craig Ridley of Mt. Prospect and Tom Benjamin of Buffalo Grove notched 151s. Dirk Anderson of Arlington Heights posted a 153, Larry Utley of Buffalo Grove came in at 158 while Fred Fassnacht and David Nelson of Mt. Prospect withdrew.

Pro grid lottery undecided

WILMINGTON, Del. — A federal judge has promised a ruling by Friday on the National Football League's suit to block Delaware's pro football lottery.

After hearing nearly two hours of arguments Wednesday, the judge told attorneys for the NFL and the state to expect a decision.

Delaware officials, who envision a net profit of $2 million during the 14-week NFL season, are planning to start the football wagering game the weekend of Sept. 12, the first weekend of NFL games.

Ilie 'shoved' into spotlight

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Temperamental Romanian Ilie Nastase became involved in a battle of words that led to a shoving match between the players in a match eventually won by Nastase in straight sets Wednesday in the $60,000 Tennis Week Open at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

The tournament had become a focal point with each appearance of transsexual Dr. Renee Richards and Nastase, the defending men's champion, had been out of the spotlight.

Nastase took care of that Wednesday en route to a 6-4, 6-3 victory over Colin Dibley in second round action. It had been more or less a routine match for Nasty since Dibley's feared serve (fastest in the world and once measured at 148 MPH) is nullified effectively by the slow clay court.

Blanda to play . . . at Medinah

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — "I expect to be playing golf at Medinah No. 3 in Chicago by Friday morning," said George Blanda Wednesday.

The 26-year pro football veteran was placed on waivers Tuesday by the Oakland Raiders and must wait until this afternoon to find out whether any other team will pick up his $90,000 a year contract.

"They'd be crazy if they do," said the former Chicago Bear quarterback. "Who wants a 48-year-old place kicker with a $90,000 contract?

Suspended players file suit

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Six Michigan State University football players suspended from the Spartan roster in the wake of a recruiting scandal asked a federal court Wednesday to overturn their suspensions.

An attorney for the players filed suit in U.S. District Court charging MSU, the school's athletic council, the NCAA and the Big Ten denied the players' constitutional rights to due process.

Charges against the players involve alleged use of credit cards, automobiles and other favors offered by MSU football boosters, who — according to the NCAA — were "representative of the university's athletic interests." The action, according to the NCAA, amounted to a recruiting violation.

The suit contends the players were not given an opportunity to defend themselves before NCAA or Big Ten officials meeting in Denver earlier this year.

3 Bears doubtful starters

Four Chicago Bears — three who would have been included in the starting lineup — were listed Wednesday as doubtful players for Saturday's exhibition game against Tampa Bay. The Bears said running backs Walter Payton and Mike Adamle, wide receiver Bo Rather, and safety Craig Clemons all were suffering from slight injuries or minor ailments and would probably not be available for the preseason game.

Van Arsdale twins reunited

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Braves Wednesday traded veteran forward-guard Tom Van Arsdale to the Phoenix Suns, where he will join his brother Dick Van Arsdale.

Buffalo got Tom Van Arsdale in a trade with Atlanta for guard Ken Charles and forward Dick Gibbs June 16, but he had balked at reporting to the Braves.

Perfection in 'Little Series'

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Kiyoshi Tsumura hurled a perfect game for Tokyo to destroy Kaiserslautern, West Germany 25-0 Wednesday in the 30th Annual Little League Baseball World Series. Tsumura, who hit a grand slam homer in the fifth inning faced only the minimum of 18 batters in the six-inning game and struck out 15.

Palatine hockey signup slated

The Palatine Amateur Hockey registration will be held Sept. 4-11 at Birchwood Park. A mail-in registration form may be sent to the Palatine Park District.

Anyone unable to register at this time will be handled on a first-come basis until the program is full. Late registrants should contact the Palatine Park District to determine if there are openings in the program.

Registration for the Pre-Mite program will be held at the same time. This program will consist of two sessions, and each session will require a $15 registration fee and will consist of 10 hours of ice time. The first session will be held in November and December and the second in January and February.

Trotters prepare show for 51st season of fun

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — With the bouncy American tune "Sweet Georgia Brown" filling the fortress on the edge of the Sahara Desert and armed guards patrolling the walls above the French Foreign Legion suddenly called a brief halt to the war in Algeria.

They had summoned the Harlem Globetrotters to a "command performance."

The unusual setting for a basketball game in Sidi Bel Abbes, Algeria, in the mid 1950s was nothing new for "America's goodwill ambassadors in short pants."

In 1959, the Trotters brought home fur pelts and postage stamps as their only payment for performing in Nikita Krushchev's Russia. They dribbled basketballs in bull rings in Spain, were received by three Popes and set an all-time attendance record of 75,000 in Berlin's Olympic Stadium.

Now celebrating their 50th anniversary, you would think the Harlem Globetrotters would be satisfied after conquering 94 nations and billions of people with laughter and their dipsydoodle basketball buffoonery.

Not so.

"I'd like to get into China for a short time," said Meadowlark Lemon, the "clown prince of basketball," now entering his 23rd season with the Globetrotters.

"In going behind the Iron Curtain in the past, I think we were able to show the people another side of what this country is all about. What me as a black person is all about. In many cases people behind the Iron Curtain thought we were still in slavery, judging by some of the propaganda.

"They thought we couldn't own a car or walk down a street and there were a lot of people who had heard bad things about this country that weren't necessarily true. We were able to set a lot of those things straight."

Many things have changed since the Globetrotters played their first game Jan. 7, 1927 in Hinkley, Ill., for a lump sum of $75, dreaming only of one day "Globetrotting" throughout the State of Illinois.

Gone is Abe Saperstein, the portly 5-foot-3-inch Polish business dynamo, who conceived, owned, managed, coached, drove around, sewed the uniforms for and promoted the Harlem Globetrotters from the very start until his death March, 1966 during the Trotters' 40th anniversary.

Also gone is Reece "Goose" Tatum, considered the greatest of all the Globetrotters, who died several years ago.

But Lemon, who says his age "is somewhere between 18 and 100" and Marques Haynes, perhaps the greatest dribbler in the history of the game, remain, and so does the name of the game.

"Laughter, that's what it's all about," said Lemon. "Seeing people enjoying themselves. Whether it's here in the states or in England, France, Yugoslavia, Russia, Spain or wherever. Laughter is international. People don't laugh in Russian or French — they just laugh."

The Globetrotters, who recently moved their company headquarters from Chicago to Los Angeles, are looking forward to their 51st season beginning in October under new president Stan Greeson, who has overseen operations of the team since 1972.

Greeson said he was working on a project that would take the Globetrotters to China, although first efforts have failed.

"When the U.S. Ping Pong team went to China on tour several years ago, I established contact by various means with All Sports Communications for The Republic of China headquartered in Peking," Greeson said.

"It looked like over a period of almost a year that we were getting very close to the point where we were told it's simply a matter of a few weeks and the OK will be given and then we could make specific arrangements.

"Those weeks passed and instead of an OK I got a letter from the head of the China sports agency from Peking saying very nicely that they had made a determination that there were enough exchanges for awhile and they were not going forward with any new ones.

"That was it. There was no recourse."

Greeson said the project was still alive and was heartened because of the popularity of basketball in China.

"It's the only place on the face of the earth where the Globetrotters haven't played basketball," he said. "Supposedly, there isn't a city or village in China where there isn't a post and board and a basket. The Chinese are very much into basketball."

North Carolina tops cage recruits

Dean Smith, who used several of his North Carolina players to help the United States win the gold medal in basketball at the Montreal Olympics, has recuited the finest freshman basketball players for 1976 according to the Raleigh, N. C. Times.

The Times annually rates the recruiting efforts of all the major college basketball teams in the country.

The Atlantic Coast Conference and Big Ten put the most teams in the top 20.

THE ACC, of which North Carolina is a member, nailed down three of the top eight spots while the Big Ten put five teams in the top 20.

Indiana, coming off a national championship season, had the best recruiting year among Big Ten squads according to the survey.

The Hoosiers ranked fourth while the Big Ten's Purdue (fifth), Wisconsin (18th), Iowa (19th) and Minnesota (20th) also made the top 20.

Illinois State grabbed the 13th spot in the ratings.

ISU was rated above the University of Kentucky although the Wildcats, defending National Invitational Tournament champions, won a recruiting war for Lawrenceville's Jay Shidler.

The top 20 recruiting groups, as compiled by the Raleigh Times, are: 1. North Carolina, 2. South Carolina, 3. Maryland, 4. Indiana, 5. Purdue, 6. Washington State, 7. UCLA, 8. North Carolina State, 9. Georgetown, 10. Pittsburgh, 11. LSU, 12. LaSalle, 13. Illinois State, 14. Louisville, 15. Virginia Tech, 16. Kentucky, 17. Arizona State, 18. Wisconsin, 19. Iowa, 20. Midwest to showcase familiar football powerhouses

by ED SAINSBURY
UPI Sports Writer

Once again it should be Michigan and Ohio State against the Big Ten dwarfs and Notre Dame challenging for another national championship in the 1976 Midwest college football season.

This could be the year of the breakthrough in the Big Ten for Michigan.

The Big Ten title has come down to the annual Michigan-Ohio State clash every year but once since 1967. And it should be more of the same this year with the two determining the title in their season closing contest.

But this time Michigan, which has beaten the Buckeyes only once with one tie in the last six years, could be the victor. Coach Bo Schembechler has quarterback Rick Leach, running back Rob Lytle and flanker Jim Smith again on hand among eight offensive and seven defensive starters, as well as numerous tested reserves on both units.

Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes, who had his usual excellent recruiting year, may have to get super performances from some freshmen, although he has a strong nucleus available on both units. Quarterback may be in the hands of sophomore Rod Gerald, and he might have to overwork fullback Pete Johnson. Seven starters return on the defensive unit, but the Buckeye offensive lineup may not be set until November.

Notre Dame's major losses came on the offensive line, but Coach Dan Devine can begin his second season with veterans in the backfield, headed by quarterback Rick Slager and running backs Al Hunter, Mark McLane and Jerome Heavens.

The latter could turn into a surprise breakaway threat.

The Irish defense should be tougher than ever with only three holes to fill. Two of them may be taken already with the shift of wide receiver Ted Burgmeier and fullback Jim Browner to the defensive backfield. Otherwise Ross Browner, Willie Fry and Jeff Weston up front and linebackers Bob Golic and Doug Becker should keep Notre Dame solid.

Purdue and Minnesota figured to be the top challengers to finish No. 3 in the Big Ten. The Boilermakers have 10 defensive starters back and could be stronger offensively with Mark Vitali again at quarterback and standout running back Scott Dierking returning.

Minnesota was expecting a good year with eight veterans on defense and seven on offense, among them quarterback Tony Dungy, who led the conference in passing and total offense. The Gophers won three of their last five games last year, losing to Michigan and Ohio State in that stretch.

Michigan State, under new Coach Darryl Rogers, might have been a threat, but suspension of seven players for the early season games could ruin the Spartans' chances before November. Ohio State, upset by Spartan charges of recruiting violations, could ruin Michigan State in the opening game too, although the Spartans probably will be seeking revenge for Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes' admission he turned in Michigan State for the violations which resulted an NCAA penalty.

Indiana should be improved with Terry Jones or Bob Kramer at quarterback and running back Courtney Snyder on hand again. The Hoosiers will have more experience than usual on both the offensive and defensive lines. Northwestern also could be better with Randy Dean returning at quarterback, Greg Boykin at running back, and Scott Yelvington at wide receiver.

Illinois, with Kurt Steger at quarterback again, should have problems with an inexperienced offensive line and too many holes for a consistent defensive effort. Iowa lost the bulk of its standout players and will have shore up holes at linebacker and in the offensive backfield. Wisconsin will use a new multiple-T offense, but will have largely inexperienced personnel to try to make it work. Losses in the backfield among the linebackers will make the defense questionable for half the season at least.

In the mid American conference, Miami figures again as the title favorite with running back Rob Carpenter sure to spark the offense and linebacker Mark Hatgas and tackle Joe Hasenohrl leaders of a defensive unit which allowed only 86 yards per game on the ground last year.

Bowling Green with running backs Dan Saleet ar[illegible] Preston and quarterback Mark Miller on hand again, stacks up as the chief challenger to the Redskins, with Ball State perhaps a threat also on the strength of a strong defense headed by Dennis Hetrick, Toddy Harvey, Dave MacLean and safety Mike Leckliter, plus quarterback Art Yaroch to spark the offense. Central Michigan boasts the league-leading rusher of last year, Walt Hodges, and could be a darkhorse.

Paddock tennis tourney leg.

"My partner tried to cover up for me the best he could," said Clark. "But it was hopeless."

So this year Clark will be trying to recapture the singles and doubles titles he won two years ago. He was also singles champ in 1973.

"I'm actually hitting the ball a little harder now than when I was younger," said Clark, who is passing up a tournament in Danville the weekend of the Paddock Tourney. "Years ago I played a safe game — I could run all day and just wait for my shot. Now, I can't run all day so I try to hit the hard ball quicker.

"I want to win the point or lose it," Clark said, chuckling. "I just want to get it over with."

Clark, who won the prestigious Chicago Public Parks title in 1941 over Charley Shostrom and was a member of the CDTA's Junior Davis Cup team, is now looking forward to a full-time job as tennis instructor at River Trails Tennis Club.

"I took early retirement to do this," said Clark. "It's something I've wanted to do all my life but just haven't had time to do. I would have done it years ago — but years ago teaching tennis was a starving situation. Today, all kinds of people want to learn tennis.

"And tennis is a good game, too," continued Clark. "It's a helluva exercise. And there are all levels of play for everybody."

Just about every level of competition will be represented in the Paddock Tourney, starting a week from Saturday.

"The Paddock is a tough tourney," said Clark. "You have to play so many matches in just a couple of days. Last year I just ran out of gas against Laffey in the finals. You have to be in top shape to beat him."

But Clark will be there — and maybe he'll bring the Ogden Bowl to psyche out his opponents.

Working mothers

A job more likely once kids in school

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

(Last of a series)

The ringing of school bells this week will signal the start of paychecks for many Northwest suburban mothers, as more and more women head off to work when their children leave for class.

In an attempt to bypass the "empty nest syndrome," pay off the new mortgage or just perk up the pace of their coffee-at-10 lives, many mothers are finding that a paid job — or educational preparation for that job — is fitting the bill. The statistics tell the story: in March of last year, one of every two mothers with school age children was working — a hike of more than 800 per cent since 1940 — and their numbers are increasing every year.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that women are steadily increasing the length of their participation in the labor force, and more women are returning to work soon after the birth of their children. But the number of mothers working full-time with preschool children still lags behind those with school age youngsters, and the start of first grade is still a convenient springboard into the job market.

"EVERY SEPTEMBER our phones light up like crazy," says Rita Cohen, a vocational counselor at Women's Inc., a Hinsdale employment firm that specializes in helping women return to the labor force. "We get the biggest crunch when the last child leaves for grade school . . . but many mothers also wait until the children are in college," she adds.

Why are women returning to work when their children start their ABCs? Undoubtedly, the economic crunch has made its mark, and those college educations looming over the hill provide many women with the impetus to seek paid employment. But the women's liberation movement has exerted an influence, too.

"What we're seeing now is a need for women to express themselves . . . increasingly, this is through a paid job," says Rena Trevor, head of the women's program at Harper College. "Let's face it, women live longer than men. We have a good 30 years after the children leave home, and it helps to have something meaningful to take up the time."

TO HELP EASE that transition from toilets to typewriters, both Harper and Oakton College offer courses covering everything from job interview information to family reactions. One of the biggest problems is the fact that many women hold elementary education degrees but possess little training for today's job market. Though educational training will supply those skills, the prospect of exams and term papers at age 40 is often a frightening one — and counselors at both the colleges and Women's Inc. stress the importance of good old self-confidence.

"We see many women with a high school education who have had jobs and want to continue their education for a career, but they're afraid they won't be able to handle a school situation," says Marge Rossman, co-director of Women's Inc. "We try to convince those who say they haven't any skills that keeping the PTA books for 10 years can easily be translated into accounts payable."

But persuading themselves that tackling school and/or a new job won't be as difficult as they'd first imagined is only half the battle for mothers returning to work. Most of the women at Women's Inc. — their ages range from 20 to 67 with the average 38 — start out with dreams of a "career" rather than a "job," but when they realize that the payment is a new lifestyle with extra demands and pressures, they often back down. Says Ms. Rossman, "Many women will over-emphasize how important it is to be home with their children . . . if they do feel this policeman role, they won't be comfortable working."

PAT HANDZEL, head of women's studies at Oakton College, agrees that many older women are reluctant to make changes in their established routines.

"These women have been scripted to believe that the family is everything," says Ms. Handzel. "Many come in and want information about jobs with 9-3 hours and summers off, but most employers just haven't accommodated to this lifestyle."

The pressures of returning to a secretarial job while managing a household with four school age children proved to be too much for one Mount Prospect mother, who wishes to remain anonymous. The woman started back to work in 1963 when her then-youngest child was in first grade, but the job ended six months later after she realized that "I was washing floors on a Saturday night, and something had to go. At that point, it was the job."

The woman returned to work because "I knew I'd had it with women's clubs . . . I felt out of things, and not as aware as I should be," but she didn't realize that breaking into a new job after 13 years at home would mean several major adjustments.

WHEN HER NOW 11-year-old daughter was four, she decided to give the working world another try. This time, she learned to compromise: "You can't divide yourself in a thousand pieces, and the housework seemed the easiest thing to relax on," she says.

Her husband's gradual transition from why-isn't-the-dinner-on-the-table to doing the weekly grocery shopping has helped considerably, and she emphasizes that a supportive spouse is often the key to a woman's success in the working world.

But while an understanding husband may be one of a working woman's biggest assets, "a lot of husbands may say, 'Great, go back to work' — and they still expect those clean socks in the drawer as usual," says Oakton's Ms. Handzel with a smile.

"If a woman's return to work means extra work for the husband, he probably won't be overjoyed," adds Ms. Cohen. "But the most important thing is to keep up a steady level of communication . . . you can't just spring it on him on a Sunday afternoon that you want to go back to work the next week."

AN UNSUPPORTIVE husband wasn't one of Carol Moeller's problems when she decided to expand her volunteer work as a teacher's aide and librarian to a paid position at the Wood Dale Library. But it took a while to get rid of the Good Housekeeping image that portrays Mom as a super being who can schedule an important conference, dress as sleekly as Audrey Hepburn, and whip up baked Alaska — all in the same day.

"I'd like to say it was a snap, but I can't," says Mrs. Moeller. "I'd still like to have a nice clean house all the time, and it still nags at me that I no longer have time for teaching Sunday school."

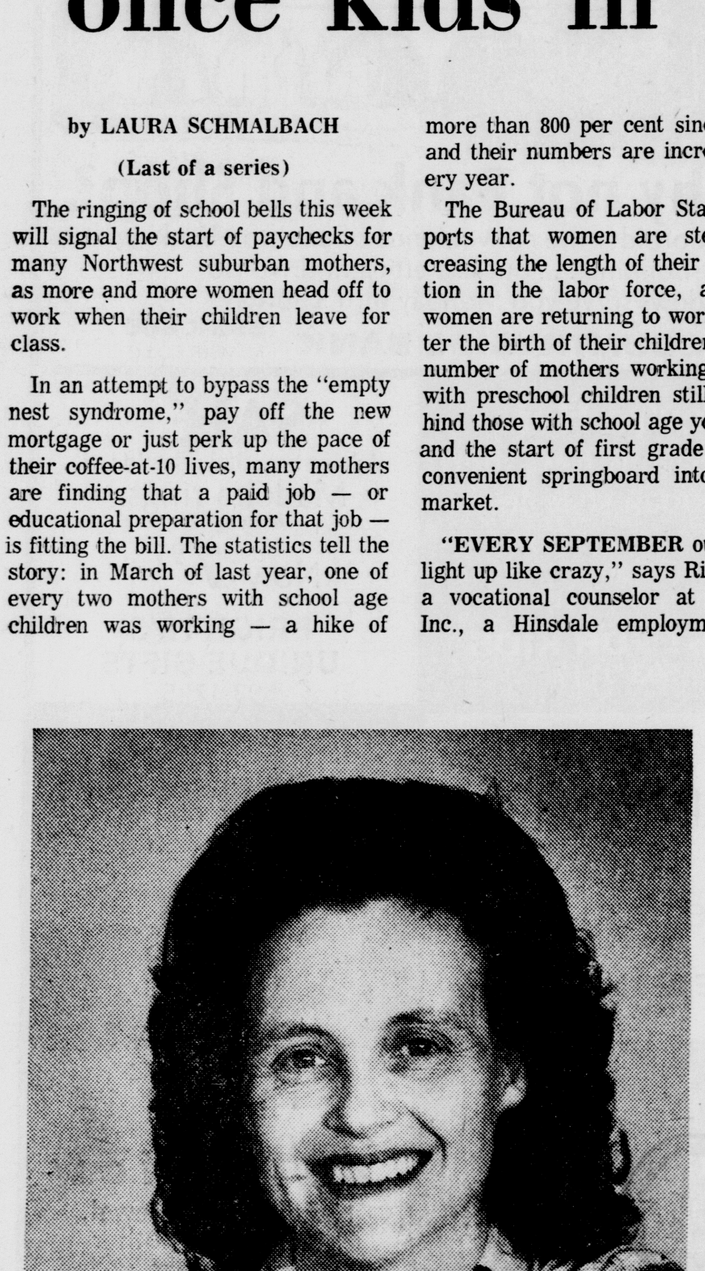
She also feels "a little hurt" that she's considered an outsider among her non-working neighbors, and she regrets that she doesn't have the time to keep up the social contacts that she used to.

BUT GIVE IT up? No way, says Mrs. Moeller with a laugh. "Working has given me a whole new outlook on things . . . and I sure do appreciate my husband a lot more," she adds.

Mrs. Moeller emphasizes that her volunteer work was a great way to break into the working world. "It lets you feel your way a little more slowly, and that's an advantage when you've got a family to deal with," she says.

"It's easy to be demoralized when you haven't worked for five years, and volunteer work gives that confidence you need," she adds. "But as time goes on, you feel the need to be paid. I like to think that if I want to buy something, I'm not depriving anyone else . . . I wouldn't give it up for the world."

MANY WOMEN returning to work when their children start school find it hard to change their established routine, say counselors at Women's Inc., a Hinsdale employment firm. Co-directors Marge Rossman, left, and Nancy Miller stress good communication with family members to ease pressures.



VOLUNTEER WORK can be a spring board to a paid position, says librarian Carol Moeller, Elk Grove Village. She served as a teacher's aide before taking the library job.

Woman on her own: she's going to try it

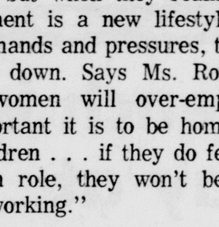
by Monica Wilch Perin



This is my 214th — and last — column. Next week I am embarking on some new career directions. My employment will be largely self-initiated. Insanity, according to some of my colleagues; enviable adventure, say others.

The urge to break loose and do one's own thing has been quite the rage in recent years — bankers suddenly opting out of the rat race to open fruit stands, and the like.

Actually, the trend may have peaked and begun to go the other way again toward social conformity. That would figure — I always seem to pick up on fads on their way out!

But then again, among women going into business independently is definitely not passe. Since women for so long have been kept out of the male boardrooms and out of the economic mainstream, they have countered by establishing their own boardrooms and their own economic systems.

I HAVE WRITTEN in the past about two local women who have their own affirmative action consulting business, and there are others now. I have also written about a group of women in Skokie who have established a women's credit union with the hope of lending money to women for business and personal purposes, purposes which otherwise would go unfulfilled because women so often can't get money from male institutions.

There are lots of fair credit laws floating around now aimed at various aspects of the economic chain, but the battle is still far from won. As in any struggle, this one requires women who will bother to challenge stores that balk at giving them credit in their own name and banks who ask illegal personal questions and then refuse to grant a loan for no legitimate reason.

IT WILL TAKE women who are willing to commit some of their money to institutions like the women's credit union and forego a higher interest rate in order to build an economic base for all women.

And when women finally have at least as firm a hold on society's purse strings as men, the rest of the equal rights hubbub will be beside the point. Any attitudes or laws that haven't been changed through agitation will melt away — as always in our society — in the face of money and power.

And then will come the moment of truth. Will women be any more fair, just and generous in their wielding of power than men have been? Given human nature, there is no reason to think they will be — but at least we still have our chance to try.

Today marks "Equality Day" across the land, marking the 56th anniversary of the day American women received the vote.

The theme of the vigils, marches, speechs, concerts and rallies that are planned is "Shoulder-to-shoulder for the Equal Rights Amendment." Four more states need to ratify it.

Many events marking the anniversary will occur Saturday, a non-working day, however, in hopes of attracting greater crowds. The main event, an ERA vigil outside the White House that began July 4, will end Saturday.

Cancer clinics advised to limit breast X-rays

The National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society this week advised their breast cancer detection centers in 27 cities against routine use of X-ray screening for women under age 50.

In a nine-point letter sent to the clinics, which have screened 263,000 women since the joint program began about 1973, the NCI and ACS detailed "interim guidelines" for use of X-ray mammography.

Richard Costlow, program coordinator at the cancer institute, said they should help directors of the detection projects decide how to proceed until NCI chief Frank J. Rauscher Jr. makes a final decision on the question "within the next several weeks."

Rauscher has ordered three scientific teams to review the effects of routine X-ray screening, after a staff scientist said the risks of its causing cancer might be greater than the benefits of spotting early signs of the disease in "asymptomatic" younger women.

SCIENTISTS GENERALLY agree its benefits outweigh any risks for women over 50, who include two-thirds of all breast cancer cases, and for women who have symptoms of possible cancer.

"We cannot recommend the routine use of mammography in screening asymptomatic women ages 35 to 50 years in the NCI-ACS breast cancer detection program at this time," said the letter mailed earlier this week.

"However, in the face of a very small presumed risk for any individual woman, we do not recommend withholding mammography . . . if she and a physician agree it is in her best immediate interest."

It said women who decline mammography should be encouraged to continue in the screening program for physical history and such alternative screening methods as thermography, a method involving pictures taken through heat radiation.

No cholesterol in margarine

I have read that the hardened oils in margarine are just as high in cholesterol as the animal fat in butter. What is your opinion of beating vegetable oil into butter to make a soft spread? Would this cut down on the cholesterol problem?

Cholesterol is not fat and fat is not cholesterol. There is no cholesterol in any margarine made only with vegetable products. Hardening vegetable oils by adding hydrogen to the unsaturated fats converts them to saturated fats. One of the purposes of using a vegetable margarine is to decrease the saturated fat intake. A high saturated fat intake may cause the body to produce excess amounts of cholesterol whether the saturated fats come from animal or vegetable products.

You can improve both butter and vegetable margarine by beating in a polyunsaturated fat. I use one of the corn oil margarines mixed with safflower oil. Two small tubs of margarine are mxed with one tub of safflower oil. You can improve its butter flavor then by seasoning to your taste with imitation butter flavored salt. You can usually find that with the spices at the supermarket. If you want it to be more solid like ordinary margarine you can keep it stored in the freezing compartment of your refrigerator.

To help you clarify the difference between cholesterol and fats I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Since I was a small child I have had those ugly white patches of skin on my body — a pigment problem. Also my hair is white in places. My mother said that I was not born that way but developed it when I was 6 years old and started school. I have always been told to just live with it, but I wish those people had to. If there is something for it I really would like to know — a special diet — a vitamin — shots or anything. Any information you can give me will be appreciated.

You probably have vitilago which means a failure of the skin to form pigment in spots. This results in lard-white spots that are particularly noticeable in dark complexioned people. It is not dangerous and is important only from a cosmetic point of view.

Treatment certainly leaves something to be desired, but some people with this condition get help from treatment with a medicine called Oxsoralen (methoxsalen). After taking the medicine by mouth, the patient is exposed to sunlight or to artificial light sources that include the same effect in shorter periods.

It can be applied locally and then a light source used, but this should be done under a doctor's supervision and not by the patient. The combination of the stimulation of the light plus the medicine will sometimes help to eliminate the problem, but the treatment is not always successful. A dermatologist could help you with the problem.

Grease can be burned off blackened skillet

Dear Dorothy: Recently I put two chickens in a shallow iron pan in the oven of a wood-burning stove, then left the house for a time. The oven got very hot and the chicken burned black. Needless to say, the pan will not come clean. I've heard that putting an iron skillet in an open outdoor fire will remove all burned-on matter, outside and inside. Is such a treatment advisable? — Mrs. Oran Ferguson Checked one of the largest manufacturers. Ginny Hauser, the consumer service counselor, confirms that by submersing a skillet in coals, grease will burn off both inside and outside. But it will mean a total reseasoning of the pan. Ginny herself never lets a seasoned utensil get near dishwater because it destroys seasoning. She uses only hot water and a brush or plastic scratcher to remove food particles. I find coarse steel wood with pumice soap the most effective way to get burned-on glop from iron pans. Granted, it's sometimes hard work, but I think it better than the outdoor fire method.

Dear Dorothy: It may be that other mothers are making the same mistake I was and so a thought to share. My youngster loves his bath and was always squalling a bit over my rushing him through it. It came to me that there were things I could usefully do while he splashed around — like small mending jobs or checking cookbooks and other sources for dinner recipes. Both of us are much happier with the new relaxed bath schedule. — Augusta Baillar

Dear Dorothy: Struck me that Mrs. J. B. Fischer might have misspoken when she talked of picking parsnips. Root vegetables are pulled or dug, not picked. I'm a parsnip fan, the recipient of many tips from my father-in-law, who is an avid gardener. Parsnips are sweetest, he says, when left in the ground through the winter. — Ruth Lyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cory Snelten

Following their July 31 wedding and a honeymoon at Cove Haven in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania, Debbie Kass and her bridegroom, Cory Snelten, are residing in their home in Cary. A graduate of Wheeling High, Debbie is with Union 76 in Palatine and Cory, a graduate of Hersey High, is with Dick Ward Transmissions, Palatine.

Debbie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kass, Buffalo Grove, and Cory, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Snelten, Prospect Heights, were married in St. Mary's Church in Buffalo Grove during a 2:30 p.m. double ring service.

FOR HER MARRIAGE Debbie chose an organza gown with Venise lace trim, a Camelot headpiece to hold her lace-edged veil, and a cascade of white carnations, stephanotis and aprocot roses with baby's breath.

In the same gowns were the bridesmaids: Debbie's sister, Diana; her sister-in-law, Pam Kass, Hanover Park; the groom's sister, Lezlie; Mellode Didier, Prairie View; and Rosemary Richard and Sandy Glowienki, cousins from Chicago. Gail Newman – Max Bonecutter Lace nearly 125 years old that had belonged to her great-great-aunt was used on Gail Newman's veil when she became the bride July 31 of Max Bonecutter. The lace-trimmed veil was first worn by Gail's grandmother, Mrs. William Huey of Kennett Square, Pa., in 1942, then again by her mother in 1951.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Newman, Prospect Heights, Gail chose a gown of ivory jersey with lace trim for the 3:30 p.m. double ring service which was held in the Newman garden. Her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bonecutter of Bronson, Mich.

GAIL, A '72 graduate of Hersey High and a '76 graduate of Northwestern University, is now working toward her master's in German at New York University, New York City, and Max, who also studied at Northwestern, is bass trombonist with the orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera Co., New York City. The music for the wedding was provided by a trombone quartet. The Rev. Arthur Wille of St. John United Church of Arlington Heights was officiating clergyman.

Maid of honor was Gail's sister, Katherine, and bridesmaids were Mrs. Chris Diepenbock, Peoria, and Catherine Yetter, Arlington Heights. Katherine was in burnt orange jersey and carried yellow carnations and mums with ivy. The others were in light orange and their flowers were in rust. Gail's flowers were white orchids with stephanotis and ivy.

BEST MAN was Max' brother, Bruce of Chicago, and ushers were his brother, Lee of Bronson, and Paul Harris of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Bonecutter

A buffet dinner reception was held under a canopy tent where 95 guests greeted the couple.

Gail and Max honeymooned in Maine and are now making their home in Ridgefield, N.J.

Organizational meeting for new Homemaker unit

A number of phone calls to the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service office in Rolling Meadows requesting information on how to join the Extension homemakers organization has prompted the calling of an organizational meeting.

The meeting will be held Wednesday, Sept. 8, at 7:30 p.m. in Schaumburg Township Library. Anyone in the area interested in the Extension homemakers organization is invited. At the organizational meeting, Lynn A. Bredemeyer, Extension adviser in home economics, will present a mini-lesson. She will be assisted by Lucille Paluski, county second vice president. Members of the Suburban Cook County Homemakers Extension Association board will also be present.

A MEMBER OF THE Homemakers Extension Association (HEA) joins a unit with a minimum of 15 members who meet monthly. "As an Extension homemaker, a unit member has an opportunity to continue her education in the field of home economics, to become a leader and to further enhance her personal growth," said Mrs. Bredemeyer. "She is an off-campus student of the University of Illinois."

Cooperative Extension specialists bring to the units their expertise in the fields of clothing, family economics, and home management, family life, foods and nutrition, health education, home furnishing, design and housing. Extension homemakers also support the 4-H youth program in the county.

Companion planting is effective

by Mary B. Good

Another successful experiment lends credibility to the effectiveness of companion planting for insect control and increased yields.

For half a dozen years or so I have been practicing planting together various vegetables which are mutually beneficial for half a dozen years or so. The list of possible good neighbors is endless. (See "Companion Plants and How to Use Them" by Philbrick and Gregg, published by Devon Adair Co.) so it is conceivable that I could spend the next 50 years pairing likely prospects.

This year, the results of my broccoli-tomato experiment were so remarkable, I want to share them with you.

I CHOSE TWO areas of my experimental plot, which soil tested about the same. In one, I planted broccoli seedlings surrounded on three sides by tomato transplants. (The fourth side was lined with perennial peppermint.) In the second area, broccoli seedlings were set out with no plants nearby which would offer protection against insects or tend to improve growth of the broccoli. The broccoli companion-planted with the tomatoes grew large, beautiful heads and no insects attacked them.

The broccoli growing alone did not do as well; the broccoli were smaller and needed frequent water blasts with a Fels Naphtha soap-based spray to keep them free of insects and insect eggs.

Nowhere is broccoli specifically mentioned as a good companion plant with tomatoes. But cabbage is — and broccoli follows the same rules of behavior as the other members of the cabbage (brassica) family. If you grow anything in the cabbage line — Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, kale, et al — you know that the brassicas are the most difficult of the vegetable families to grow without using pesticides. Insects love them!

ACCORDING TO Philbrick-Gregg: "The cabbage has been developed to an enormous terminal bud, while its flowering process has been subordinated. This one-sided evolution results in a life cycle that is easily upset under adverse conditions. The cabbage is greatly helped if it is surrounded by plants which have many blossoms, or which are strongly aromatic. Both of these characteristics help to balance the cabbage plant's weaknesses."

Here are some additional insect control measures for members of the cabbage family: Catnip planted near cabbage famly members deters flea beetles: camomile improves the growth and flavor of brassicas; mint deters cabbage moths; nasturtiums repel aphids. Celery, dill, sage, onions, beets, potatoes, and rosemary are all good companions for cabbage family plants.

COMPANION PLANTING is a good way to anticipate insect invasion. But companion planting calls for advance planting. You can't employ this method once all the stuff is stuck in the ground.

How do we know that companion planting has any scientific basis? Countless series of crystalization tests (described in an earlier Potting shed article) using equal parts of different plants in combination confirm observations and field tests.

For a list of a myriad of good and bad plant companions for insect control and greater yield, as an aid for planting your next garden, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my booklet, "Companion Plants for Super Success" to Mary B. Good, Rte. 2, Box 461, Minocqua, Wis. 54548.

Keep soft contacts clean while traveling

More and more traveling Americans are doing their sightseeing through soft contact lenses because they give long hours of wearing comfort and they are suited to all sports except swimming. But they do present some special problems for people on the move.

Dr. Emily Karp, an ophthalmologist at State University of New York Downstate Medical Center, says wearers of soft contacts should clean and disinfect them daily while traveling and should be aware of their options if there is no electricity.

Dr. Karp, who wears soft contact lenses and is a frequent traveler herself, offers these tips:

• Pack salt tablets in a pill box — one for each day. Don't mix with other pills such as aspirin. The powder will rub off on the salt tablets. Never use table salt; it contains iodine.

• In case you lose the small, premarked bottle for mixing saline (salt) solution, remember the proportion is one ounce distilled water to one-quarter-gram salt tablet. Be sure to mix in a clean bottle.

• For convenience, bring a supply of distilled water with you; you'll need two to three ounces a day.

• Carry your contact lens prescription with you — also a pair of glasses in case you lose your lenses and for times when you are tired. Pack non-prescription sunglasses to wear over lenses on sunny days.

• For foreign travel, bring an electrical current converter for your disinfecting unit. Most hotels have outlets for American appliances, but some older hotels do not.

• If the disinfecting unit cannot be used, the lenses can be placed in their carrying case and boiled in a pan of water for 15 minutes. Watch that it doesn't boil dry. This method is best for camping and backpacking.

• Contact lenses can be worn for sunbathing, but not for swimming or sleeping. If lenses must be removed away from the clean environment of hotel or home, make sure your hands are clean. A tiny finger brush works best. Don't use packaged towlettes because they are moistened with a variety of chemicals and perfumes.

SALE PRICES TODAY thru SUNDAY

Ice cream specials of yesterday are turning into stars all over again. Oldest of those is the ice cream sundae which was an 1890s favorite. Then sodas, hailed in 1893 as the "national beverage," made the scene.

In 1904 came the ice cream cone. The Banana Skycraper is a late comer, dating to 1936 while the Black Cow came along in 1944.

For the fancier tastes of the adult world, there's Peach Melba, created by chef Auguste Escoffier after he heard Dame Nellie Melba sing in the opera, Lohengrin. Other desserts include a meringue shell filled with scoops of peppermint ice cream, drizzled with fudge sauce; and chocolate cake layered with cherry ice cream, then frosted with whipped cream and nuts.

ICE CREAM SPECIALS

STRAWBERRY SODA

- 3 tablespoons frozen strawberries in syrup, thawed
- 3 small scoops strawberry ice cream (¾ cup)
- 6 ounces chilled creme soda
- Whipped cream
- Fresh strawberry

Mash strawberries until well blended with syrup. Stir together strawberry syrup, 1 scoop ice cream and about 2 tablespoons creme soda in the bottom of a 14-ounce glass. Add 2 additional scoops of ice cream. Pour in enough soda to fill glass. Garnish with whipped cream and a strawberry. 1 serving.

BLACK COW

(Root Beer Float)

- 6 ounces chilled root beer
- 3 small scoops vanilla ice cream (about ¾ cup)
- Chilled club soda (optional)

Fill a 14-ounce glass ⅓ full with root beer. Add 1 scoop ice cream. Pour in about ¼ cup more root beer. Add 2 more scoops of ice cream. Pour in enough root beer to fill glass. Serve with club soda to add for extra carbonation, if desired. 1 serving.

TIN ROOF SUNDAE

- ¼ cup Fudge Sauce*
- 1 large scoop vanilla ice cream (¾ cup)
- 2 tablespoons Spanish salted peanuts

*FUDGE SAUCE

- 1 package (6 ounce) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
- ½ cup light cream OR half and half
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate with cream in a heavy saucepan over low heat, stirring until smooth. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Serve slightly warm. Yield: 1 cup.

BANANA SKYSCRAPER

- ¼ cup Fudge Sauce*
- 1 banana
- 1 medium scoop vanilla ice cream
- 1 medium scoop chocolate ice cream
- Whipped cream
- Maraschino cherry

Quarter a ripe banana by cutting once lengthwise and then once crosswise at center. Place 2 tablespoons Fudge Sauce in the bottom of a crimp sundae glass. Add 1 scoop of vanilla ice cream. Place banana quarters upright with pointed ends up. Add 1 scoop chocolate ice cream. Drizzle with 2 tablespoons Fudge Sauce. Top with whipped cream and cherry. 1 serving.

PEPPERMINT FUDGE MERINGUE

- 3 egg whites, at room temperature
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
- ¾ cup sugar
- 3 pints peppermint ice cream
- Fudge Sauce*

For meringue shell, beat egg whites with cream of tartar until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time; beating constantly until sugar is dissolved and whites are glossy and stand in stiff peaks. Draw a 9-inch circle on a sheet of brown paper; place on cookie sheet. Shape meringue to form a 9-inch circle on brown paper, building up sides of meringue slightly. Bake in preheated 250 degree oven 1 hour. Turn off oven; leave meringue in oven with door closed 1 hour. Remove from oven. Cool on wire rack away from draft. Fill cooled shell with scoops of ice cream. Drizzle with Fudge Sauce. 8 to 10 servings.

PEACH MELBA

- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 (½ cup) package (10 ounce) frozen raspberries, thawed
- ½ cup red currant jelly
- 8 large cling peach halves, chilled
- 2 pints vanilla ice cream

For raspberry sauce, dissolve cornstarch in 2 tablespoons syrup from raspberries. Combine raspberries, remaining syrup and jelly in saucepan. Heat to boiling. Gradually stir in cornstarch and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and clear. Cook 2 additional minutes. Cover and chill. Yield: 1½ cups.

Cut each peach half into thirds. For each serving, arrange 4 peach slices in a ring in a chilled sherbet glass. Top with a generous scoop of ice cream. Spoon about ¼ cup raspberry sauce over ice cream. 6 servings.

CHERRY ICE CREAM CAKE

- 1 package (18½ ounce) butter recipe fudge cake mix
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- 3 eggs
- ¾ cup water
- 2 pints New York cherry ice cream
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
- Chopped walnuts

Butter two 9-inch square baking pans, line bottoms with waxed paper, butter again and dust with flour. Prepare cake batter according to package directions using butter, eggs and water. Bake in prepared pans in preheated 375 degree oven about 20 minutes. Cool 20 minutes, remove from pans and remove waxed paper. Chill 1 layer of cake. (Freeze the second layer for future use.)

To assemble, cut chilled cake layer in half lengthwise to make two 9 by 4½-inch rectangles. Spoon 1 pint ice cream over one rectangle and spoon remaining ice cream on top. Wrap in foil and freeze several hours or overnight.

To serve, beat cream in a chilled bowl with chilled beaters until stiff peaks form. Fold in sugar. Place ice cream cake on a chilled serving tray. Frost sides with sweetened whipped cream. Sprinkle sides with walnuts. Garnish with fresh bing cherries and sprigs of mint, if desired. 12 servings.

Pudding mix is convenient

A poll taken even a few years ago might have found few persons who had any recollection of meltingly smooth corn starch puddings made from "scratch." But all that is changing now with the return to more basic cooking at home. Not just bread and soup, but pudding, too, is being made in more and more homes.

And where there are children, mothers will welcome two new recipes for pudding mixes developed in the Argo kitchens. The mixes are made with non-fat dry milk, corn starch, sugar and salt, with cocoa used for the chocolate pudding. Once made, the mixes are ready to be called into service for a pudding any time.

To make a low calorie pudding, use 1 part pudding mix to 2 parts water, bring to boil and boil one minute. Then stir in margarine and vanilla. For a pudding with even more of the protein, calcium and other food treasures of milk, use liquid skim milk to replace the water. And for a richer pudding, make up the treat with whole fluid milk.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING MIX

2-2/3 cups sugar
1-1/3 cups corn starch
1 cup unsweetened cocoa
½ teaspoon salt

Stir together dry milk, sugar, corn starch, cocoa and salt until well mixed. Store in tightly covered container at room temperature. Stir pudding mix before each use. Makes about 7 cups mix.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING FROM MIX

1 cup Chocolate Pudding Mix
2 cups water
1 tablespoon margarine
½ teaspoon vanilla

In medium saucepan stir together pudding mix and water until well mixed. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute. Stir in margarine and vanilla. Pour into individual serving dishes. Chill. Makes 4 (½ cup) servings.

Mocha Pudding: Follow basic recipe for Chocolate Pudding substituting 1 cup strong black coffee for 1 cup of the water.

BASIC PUDDING MIX

4 cups nonfat dry milk
1-1/3 cups sugar
1 cup corn starch
½ teaspoon salt

Stir together dry milk, sugar, corn starch and salt until well mixed. Store in tightly covered jar at room temperature. Stir pudding mix before each use .Makes about 6 cups mix.

VANILLA PUDDING FROM BASIC MIX

1 cup Basic Pudding Mix
2 cups water
2 tablespoons margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla

In medium saucepan stir together pudding mix and water until well mixed. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute. Stir in margarine and vanilla. Pour into individual serving dishes. Chill. Makes 4 (½ cup) servings.

Note: For richer, creamier pudding substitute 2 cups milk for water.

Many food falsehoods countered

by GAYNOR MADDOX

Frederick J. Stare, M.D., is chairman of the Department of Nutrition, Harvard School of Public Health. He and Dr. Elizabeth M. Whelan, a doctor of science and a former pupil of Dr. Stare, have written a reassuring book, "Panic in the Pantry, Food Facts, Fads and Fallacies." Both are internationally known nutritional scientists.

"Remember when eating was fun?" asks Dr. Whelan.

Dr. Stare, always on the trail of spurious claims of health food enthusiasts, scare copy about poison in your food and other preposterous claims about what we eat, echoes this same question in "Panic in the Pantry" (Atheneum, $8.95).

THE BOOK counters many falsehoods concerning food made available to the bewildered consumer.

"Eat your additives, they're good for you," advises Dr. Stare, with an approving nod from Dr. Whelan. "Cut out vitamin gobbling and irrational fear of packaged foods."

Vitamin E is today the prima donna of health faddists. Yet, both Harvard nutritionists say that vitamin E supplements won't make you any healthier unless you happen to be a white rat.

In reality, according to the book, vitamin E has no special preventive or curative powers and routine supplemental use of this vitamin is not recommended.

ORGANIC FERTILIZER also gets quite a boot from food mystics. There is no basis to the belief that organic food is nutritionally superior, the authors state. An apple is an apple. You simply can't change the vitamin or other aspects of the nutritional content by the fertilizer used. A food's vitamin content is largely genetically determined.

To banish panic from the pantry we need answers to five basic questions.

Where does our current additive-phobia fit in terms of historical perspective? Is this back-to-nature binge really all that new?

WHO IS "eating natural," what types of products are they buying and what are some of the problems associated with the current fascination with Health-foodland?

If something is natural, does it by definition mean it is free from chemicals and full of health-promoting materials?

What are food additives? What do they do? Are they safe?

How are food additives regulated today? What are some of the problems associated with food laws?

Dr. Whelan and Dr. Stare attempt to answer these questions in their book.

Famous jar reproduced

A limited reproduction of the extremely rare Ball Amber Buffalo jar, a hand-blown fruit jar manufactured by the Ball Corp. in the late 1800s, is now available to collectors, according to W. Stanley Stuart, Jr., vice president and general manager of Ball's Consumer Products Division.

The first fruit jars to be hand-blown in this country in almost 70 years, the re-created Amber Buffalo jars will be clearly marked as historic reproductions, with the base carrying the formal Ball trademark, the date 1976, and the words, "Muncie, Indiana," the firm's headquarters.

The original Amber Buffalo jars were blown between 1885 and 1886 when the firm's founding brothers began glass container production at what was then their headquarters in Buffalo, N.Y. When that factory was destroyed by fire in 1886, the brothers moved to Indiana to be in the center of the nation's Gas Belt for the fuel that was necessary to their operation.

THOUGH COMPANY records show that 12,500 gross of the jars were produced in 1886, there are only four known Amber Buffaloes left in existence — two quart jars which the reproductions are being patterned after, and two half-gallons. Three are housed in private collections, and one quart jar was purchased by Ball Corp. from a collector last year. These rare originals are valued at up to $1,200 each.

Hand-blown glass jars were moved off the production lines with the arrival in the early 1900s of automated glass machines, the first of which was developed by Frank C. Ball, one of the brothers who founded the company.

The original Amber Buffalo jar, like the reproduction, is closed with a milk glass top, over a rubber gasket, held in place by a zinc screw band. Technically, it is a Mason improved jar — a type made off and on for several decades by many companies. Gradually it fell out of favor as consumers demanded the more popular two-piece metal lid used today.

This special edition of jars will be offered as a mail order item only, available through the Direct Marketing Products Department of the firm's Muncie office. Cost of the jar is $20, plus $1.50 postage and handling.

Garden set up at capitol

The National Aboretum in Washington has received a Bicentennial gift that won't be ifnished until next summer.

It is a $150,000 herb garden, donated by the Herb Society of America and scheduled to be ready for viewing by midsummer, 1977.

It will include a formal knot garden with plants arranged in patterns resembling knots; specialty sections of medicinal, flavoring, oil, dye and tea plants; herbs used by the Indians and colonial settlers and species roses — the old-fashioned nonhybrid type. The garden will accommodate fairly large groups as well as individuals for visit and study tours.

Desired safety

Now that hot weather is here, take extra care to prevent foods from spoiling. Cream, custard and gelatin-based pies cannot be left at room temperature. They must be refrigerated as soon as sufficiently cooled. Remember to refrigerate pie leftovers immediately after serving.

Wheat germ adds variety to cookies

Rich and delectable wheat germ cookies make the best dessert possible to tote along in the picnic bag. They're guaranteed not to squish, drip, leak, spoil or otherwise make a mess. As with most really good home-made cookies, they will crush so do pack them in a tin, cannister or other lightweight container with a lid. To preserve their natural flavor and freshness, provide airtight home storage, too, for these out of the ordinary wheat germ cookies. That is, of course, if they don't disappear the very first day. It's almost impossible to stop sampling after the first taste!

WHEAT GERM COCONUT COOKY BALLS

- 1 cup butter, softened
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg yolk
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup vacuum packed regular wheat germ
- ¾ cup flaked coconut
- 1 tablespoon grated orange peel
- 2 cups flour
- Wheat Germ Sugar Coat

Beat butter and sugar together until fluffy. Beat in egg yolk, vanilla and salt. Blend in wheat germ, coconut, orange peel and flour. Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in 350 degree oven 12 to 14 minutes or until golden on bottom. Roll hot cookies in Wheat Germ Sugar Coat. Cool on wire racks. Makes 3 to 4 dozen cookies.

Wheat Germ Sugar Coat

Mix 1/4 cup powdered sugar with 2 tablespoons wheat germ.

WHEAT GERM SNICKERDOODLES

- 1 cup vacuum packed regular wheat germ
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup butter, softened
- 2 eggs
- 1½ teaspoons pure vanilla extract
- 2 cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt

Combine 2 tablespoons each wheat germ and sugar; add cinnamon and set aside. Beat butter and remaining sugar together until fluffy. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Mix in remaining wheat germ combined with flour, baking powder and salt. Chill dough. Shape into 1-inch balls. Roll in reserved wheat germ mixture. Place on ungreased baking sheeet. Bake in 400 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove and cool cookies on rack. Makes about 5 dozen.

Original sausage very bad

"If there's an end on which I'd spend
My last remaining cash,
It's sausage, friend, it's sausage, friend,
It's sausage, friend, and mash."

Those lines from a poem by Sir Alan Herbert show how deeply the English feel about sausage. No more deeply than a group of Londoners back in 1955 when they celebrated the return of meat to sausage. For many years, because of wartime restrictions, Britain's sausage wasn't worthy of the name. It was "a bag of mystery" filled with anything but meat. Then, when the ban was lifted, the court butcher of Hampton threw a party, complete with a fanfare of trumpets, an orchestra, a song written especially for the occasion, "Sausage Samba," and a beautiful girl they named Miss New Sausage. The mustard was passed around, and huge quantities of sausage (with meat) consumed. Then the butcher who hosted the soiree proclaimed: "I vindicate the honor of butchers everywhere in her majesty's realm!"

It is said that man can live without food for 30 days, but he will die in five or six days without water. It is also said that man does not live by bread alone. We would like to add that man does not live by words alone — even though now and then he has to eat them!

Canning regulation worked out

The various government agencies responsible for consumer protection have finally worked out an agreement designed to prevent some matters, notably home canning equipment, from going unregulated.

Although some questions remain unanswered, the basic machinery should be in place soon to handle the growing number of complaints from home canners victimized by bad jar lids, some of which were rushed into production in the shadow of last year's shortage.

The agreement gives the Consumer Product Safety Commission jurisdiction over home canning equipment in cases where it doesn't seal properly, thus exposing the consumer to an unreasonable risk of serious illness or injury. The same applies to food cooked in or stored in appliances such as pressure cookers, slow cookers, refrigerators and freezers.

IF SOMETHING in the equipment itself leaks into or migrates into the food, exposing the user to similar hazards, then it is a matter for the Food and Drug Administration.

The CPSC has launched an investigation of home canning equipment problems and will issue a report soon.

Among the questions that investigation may answer is what happens in cases where there is no immediate health threat but where the consumer loses a batch of produce because the lids don't seal. It may be that any such problem, beyond the economic loss involved, will be viewed as a potential health threat and be covered; but that remains to be seen.

CPSC Chairman S. John Byington said that "by clearing up possible future jurisdictional problems now we've made up for the delay in reaching this agreement."

NANCY STEORTS, the Agriculture Department's consumer adviser, had been after the two other agencies to clear up the jurisdictional squabble ever since the two decided earlier this year that neither could step in.

She told UPI the agreement is a step in the right direction, and the two agencies "should be commended in responding to this very definite consumer problem . . . consumers who have problems with faulty canning lids should report their complaints directly to the CPSC on the hot line."

The CPSC hotline is a toll free number on which any consumer may report hazardous products he or she encounters. It is area code 800-638-2666, except in Maryland where it is 800-492-2937.

Skimpy meal tempts one

Mrs. Ruth Buck, foods and nutrition specialist at Penn State University, warns those who cook for one or two against eating skimpy, monotonous meals.

With planning and careful shopping, she said, a variety of appealing meals can be prepared with the foods needed daily for good health. Mrs. Buck's suggestions for small-scale shopping to add variety to the diet include buying only as much food as can be used easily.

A large package, even though it is more economical, is no bargain if the food becomes stale or spoils, she said. Small-size cans of fruits, vegetables and seafood, and single-serving cans of fruit and vegetable juice often are the best buy for small households.

At the same time, larger packages of loose, frozen vegetables can be a good choice because individual portions can be removed and cooked as needed, while the remainder stays frozen.

DRY MILK is inexpensive, takes little storage space, and can be used in cooking and drinking, said Mrs. Buck.

If carrying groceries home is a problem, a package of dry milk is much easier to tote than cartons of fresh milk. Nonfat dry milk contains the same protein, calcium and riboflavin as fesh milk, Mrs. Buck said, but not as many calories, and the fortified vitamin A and D forms are added bonuses.

Dried vegetables, fruits, soups and mixes may be better choices than fresh ones because they are easy to keep and prepare in small amounts. TV dinners, individual poultry pies, and frozen entrees have improved in quality and are good to have on hand when heating may mean the difference between eating and not eating.

DON'T HESITATE to buy larger cuts of meats and whole chickens, Mrs. Buck said. Simply cut them into smaller pieces and freeze in meal-size packages the parts you won't use immediately.

Breads, crackers and cookies become stale easily, so they should be bought in small amounts if possible. Bread freezes well and can be defrosted a slice at a time, or as needed.

Summer wok cooking

Husband discovers great food enroute to Australia

by LOIS SEILER

Cooking in a wok is ideal for the summer months. Cooking time is quick, the kitchen doesn't heat up, and the dishes are tasty and nourishing.

Marta Hart's favorite wok recipe is one which her husband picked up en route to Australia. A Trader Vic's dish, it was served on the plane and George liked it well enough to bring the recipe home. Marta changed it to suit her taste, and the dish immediately made a big hit with their five children.

Using an electric wok, Marta makes Pineapple Chicken at the table, where it's fun for family and friends to watch. Strips of chicken are cooked first, then pineapple and vegetables are added and stir-fried just long enough to heat through. It is essential that the vegetables remain crisp. A rich, sweet and sour sauce flavored with apricot nectar completes the dish.

MARTA SERVES Pineapple Chicken over rice, and accompanies it with a Caesar salad and French bread. She simplified the usual multi-step Caesar salad recipes by using a blender. Instead of the messy business of dropping a raw egg over the salad greens and adding this and that, she puts the egg in a blender with Parmesan cheese, lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce and seasonings. This can be done ahead.

Then, just before serving, Marta tosses salad greens, tomatoes and croutons with garlic-flavored oil, and tosses again with the blender mixture.

To complete the meal, Marta suggests an elegant Daiquiri Dessert. She makes this on a flat crystal plate, forming a piped edge with rum-flavored whipped topping. This is filled with coconut-flavored lime sherbet and pecan-dotted raspberry sherbet, and is garnished with additional coconut and pecans. Frozen until firm, this pretty dessert is light and refreshing. Proof of its popularity is the many requests Marta has had for the recipe.

MARTA NEVER resorts to short-order cooking. She is inventive with food preparation and routinely cooks with wok and fondue pot.

Before her marriage, Marta was women's editor of the Niagara Falls Gazette. Since moving from Masachusetts to Arlington Heights two years ago, Marta has served on the PTA boards at both Berkeley School and Rand Junior High, is golf chairman of Arlington Heights Newcomers and coaches a girls' Little League team.

PINEAPPLE CHICKEN

2 cups chicken breasts cut in 1-inch strips
18 canned pineapple cubes
1 green pepper, cut in 1-inch-long slices
1 cup diced celery
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
¼ pound bamboo shoots, fresh or canned
1 small can water chestnuts, sliced

Sweet and Sour Sauce:

1 cup apricot nectar
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 cup tomato catsup
1 teaspoon cornstarch

Prepare sauce first by combining all ingredients except cornstarch. Simmer for 30 minutes. Dissolve cornstarch in a little water; add to sauce and cook, stirring, until thickened.

In a wok, saute chicken in a little oil, but do not brown. Add all remaining ingredients and stir-fry constantly to heat vegetables through. Vegetables should remain crisp. Add sweet and sour sauce and salt and pepper to taste. Serve over a bed of rice. serves 6.

CAESAR SALAD

1 head iceberg or Romaine lettuce
2 tomatoes, quartered
½ cup croutons
½ cup salad oil
2 cloves garlic
1 egg
½ cup Parmesan cheese
¼ cup freshly-squeezed lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt
Generous grating of black pepper

Cut two cloves garlic into ½ cup salad oil. Leave at room temperature. In blender container, break egg and add Parmesan cheese, lemon juice, Worcestershire, salt and pepper. Blend.

Break lettuce into salad bowl. Add tomatoes and croutons. Strain garlic-flavored oil over lettuce in bowl. Toss. Add blender mixture and toss again. Serves 6. Anchovies may be added, if desired.

DAIQUIRI DESSERT

3 envelopes dried non-dairy whipped topping
1 cup milk
¼ cup light rum
1 quart raspberry sherbet
½ cup toasted coconut
1 quart lime sherbet
½ cup chopped pecans, toasted

With electric mixer, beat topping, rum and milk together until very stiff. Using a cookie press with a star disc, pipe this mixture around outer edge of 12 or 14 inch serving plate. Freeze until well set.

Soften lime sherbert and fold in all but two tablespoons toasted coconut. Spread mixture inside dessert edge, covering the bottom of plate. Freeze until stiff.

Soften raspberry sherbet and fold in all but two tablespoons of toasted pecans. Spread this over lime sherbet. Mix remaining coconut and pecans and sprinkle over top. Form a foil tent around dessert for protection; freeze. Remove from freezer 15 minutes before serving. Cut in wedges. Serves 12.

EDGED WITH rum-flavored whipped topping, Marta Hart's Daiquiri Dessert combines refreshing fruit sherbets with nuts and coconut to form one of the more unusual concoctions to serve to guests.

Taxes help pay for six of 10 school lunches

by BERNARD BRENNER

For about six out of every 10 American pupils, taxpayers will be picking up all or part of the bill when lunch bells ring in the nation's schools this fall.

Agriculture Department officials who operate the federal school lunch program estimate that nearly 90 per cent of all school-age youngsters are in institutions taking part in the federal program. About 60 per cent actually eat the federally subsidized meals provided by the program that dates from the 1930s.

FOR THE 1976-77 school year, experts say the number of youthful customers will reach about 26.8 million in the peak participation month, usually November. That's up about 800,000 from the 1975-76 peak reached in November, 1975.

Officials say the new year will bring some new wrinkles to the traditional program.

Among other things, regulations for senior high schools have been rewritten in an effort to end widespread waste that takes place when students are required to take entire plate lunches, including some items they do not want and will not eat.

UNDER THE NEW regulations, students still will have to pay the flat lunch price set in their schools. But they will be able to choose as few as three separate food items instead of the formerly fixed total of five included in standard, federally approved lunches.

Officials also said new application forms now cover families who apply for free or token-priced meals for their children. They include a statement acknowledging that school officials can check on statements made by an applicant after a student has been certified. The forms also include a warning that deliberate false statements by applicants could bring prosecutions.

Budget experts estimate that federal taxpayers will pour $2.264 billion into the lunch program in the coming year, compared with $1.904 billion in the 1975-76 year.

THE TOTAL for the coming year includes both cash payments and food commodities. It also includes $611 million in subsidies for children who pay regular school lunch prices. Among them are youngsters from middle and upper-income families who get the federal subsidy as well as state and local contributions so the price they pay will remain below the actual cost of the meals.

The remaining $1.653 billion, however, will go to children whose families' incomes qualify them for free and token-priced meals. In the past school year, 10.9 million children got free and token-priced lunches compared to 15.1 million who paid regular prices.

Agriculture Department school lunch experts said they had no precise estimates on lunch prices, but one veteran specialist anticipates not much increase during the coming year. He said price hikes in the past school year were held down by increased financing from local governments in many areas.

Potato Pizza

Surprise in store for pizza lovers

Pizza lovers are in for a surprise and potato devotees will be, too. Next time you feel the urge for pizza, use frozen hash browns to make a crisp crust and top with Mozzarella and Parmesan cheeses, frankfurters and pizza sauce.

Measurements are given in both metric and American Standard units. Normally, dry ingredients are measured in grams in the metric system. But American utensil and food manufacturers have developed cups and spoons for both liquid and dry ingredients to make conversion easier for cooks.

Cooking with metrics

340 grams or 12 ounces frozen shredded hash brown potatoes
125 milliliters or ½ cup chopped onions.
15 milliliters or 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine
6 frankfurters
250 milliliters or 1 cup shredded Mozzarella cheese
1 (170 gram or 6 ounce) can pizza sauce
30 milliliters or 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Place potatoes in strainer, rinse with hot water to thaw. Drain well and pat dry with paper towels. Mix with onions and shape into a 21¼ centimeter (8½-inch) round on a well-buttered pizza pan. Drizzle melted butter around edge of potatoes. Bake in a 230 degree Celsius (450 degree Fahrenheit) oven for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, put frankfurters into boiling water and simmer 3 minutes. Drain and cut each diagonally into 5 pieces. Remove potatoes from oven and sprinkle with 125 milliliters (½ cup) Mozzarella cheese. Drizzle pizza sauce over cheese and top with frankfurters. Sprinkle with remaining 125 milliliters (½ cup) Mozzarella and the Parmesan cheeses. Return to oven for 10 minutes, until hot and bubbly. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

Simplification is her secret

The working woman cooks
by Joyce Zeller

The secret to juggling a home, motherhood and a career all at the same time is to simplify. Decide what is important and what things you can do without. There are some things that just aren't going to get done anymore. Do you really have to iron sheets or even make beds? If the kids don't want to make their beds, then they'll just have to sleep in them rumpled.

Living with kids is a war of nerves, and now that you're working, you don't have the energy to be hassled. Stop counting socks and underwear. If they're not changing every day, you don't want to know about it.

There are things you can do without at mealtimes. Desserts, for instance. You can't be spending all your time baking or running to the store for dessert. Do without — the rest of us do.

CANNED FRUIT is just fine for most meals. Frozen fruit is good once in awhile as a luxury item. Keep ice cream in the freezer to satisfy the 10 p.m. sweet tooth.

For emergencies I'll offer you two receipes that are quick. The one you'll have to put together the night before. It's for those times when you're not sure tomorrow's dinner is going to be enough and you'd like to add a little more nutrition. It's rich in protein and vitamin C.

The second is an old Pennsylvania Dutch cake that is made from almost nothing. It's cheap and fast. My dad, who taught me to cook, calls it "Payday Cake" because by payday we were out of everything. Some things never change.

ORANGE RICOTTA MOLD

1 envelope plain gelatin
1 cup water
1 6-ounce can frozen orange juice concentrate ¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon rum flavoring
1 15-ounce carton ricotta cheese

Soften gelatin in a little water. Heat orange juice concentrate and remaining water in a saucepan. Add gelatin. Stir until dissolved. Add sugar and rum flavoring. Chill until partially set. Beat in cheese and pour into a four-cup mold. Chill and serve with fresh fruit.

PAYDAY CAKE

1 cup brown sugar
1 cup water
1½ cup raisins
1/3 cup shortening
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon hot water
2 cups enriched flour
½ teaspoon baking powder

Mix first seven ingredients in sauce pan and boil for 3 minutes. Cool. Stir in soda and the flour which has been sifted with the baking powder. Mix well. Pour into greased 8 inch square pan. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees. Dust with powdered sugar or use a glaze icing mix for topping.

Suggestions, tips offered to help new home canners

An electric deep fat fryer filled with water instead of oil makes a good blancher for vegetables and fruit being prepared for canning or freezing because the thermostat keeps the water at the proper temperature at very little cost in fuel energy.

For safey's sake, don't add mushrooms to tomato sauce canned by the waterbath method until you are ready to serve the sauce or use it in cooking. Mushrooms and other low-acid foods added at canning time can lower the acidity of the mixture to the danger point.

Never substitute a 30-pound food can for a waterbath canner or other large, deep pot. The weight of the water needed makes the cans unsafe because the cans' bottoms can sag.

If you have no rack for a deep clam steamer you want to use for waterbathing canned food, substitute wooden slats to hold the jars at least one inch above the bottom of the steamer, and make sure the jars do not touch each other.

All fresh garden produce carries quite a load of bacteria. To remove some of it right after picking, hose down all freshly picked produce at the garden site and finish in the kitchen, plunging it up and down, a little at a time, in plenty of fresh cold water. Drain well before refrigerating.

A wet cloth is best for handling sticky things during home canning, and a dry cloth for the nonsticky.

Beautiful old Mason jars bought at garage sales, flea markets and antique stores should be reserved for refrigerator or pantry storage use because they may have invisible scratches from years of handling that make them unsafe for additional home canning.

Eggs no good

"Eggs are better for hatching into baby chickens than for eating," a physician at the University of Chicago said.

Dr. Robert Wissler, director of the university's Specialized Center of Research in Atherosclerosis, made the comment in response to the recent ruling by the Federal Trade Commission that advertising must not imply there is no connection between eating eggs and heart disease.

Wissler said:

"It is perfectly true we don't know everything we'd like to know about heart attacks and their causes, but weight of the evidence at this point indicates that the principal underlying cause of heart attacks, or, atherosclerosis (cholesterol-filled arteries) is preventable."

Flour, yeast, salt, water

Bread needs few ingredients

Bread baking

by Catherine Clark

Flour, yeast and salt, with the addition of water, are all that are needed to make that classic and most enduring of all favorites, the crisp-crusted French loaf. The principles apply, of course, to all breads.

The most important ingredient in all good breads is flour. This means white flour made from wheat. No other grain is so well-suited to bread baking for flavor, nutrition and ability to achieve lightness. The less complex the recipe the more wheaty and delightful the aroma and taste. Classic, lean French bread, made only of flour, water, yeast and salt, cannot be surpassed for yoyous eating. Admittedly, it's a one-day bread, drying out before another day dawns.

THE QUALITY and type of bread flour varies from high protein, with a strong gluten content, often referred to as "Northern Hard Spring" and used for the best quality breads, to the softer, less expensive flours grown in the southwestern United States.

Gluten is the operative word. If you made a small, stiff, doughy ball of flour and water, held it under a running cold water faucet, working and washing out the starch which makes up the greater part of flour, you would end up with only the elastic bit of gum called "gluten." In bread mixing we "develop" the gluten by kneading and working the dough. When I give a recipe, I usually say "knead vigorously — at least 10 minutes by the clock."

We continue to develop the gluten after kneading the dough by allowing an hour or more fermentation (or raising) time in contact with the action of yeast and salt. The gluten, well distributed throughout the dough, has become ready to receive and hold the gases generated by the yeast induced fermentation.

Imagine the dough now as filled with tiny gas-filled gluten balloons. After baking, when the oven heat has expanded those balloons even more, our loaf of bread is light on the inside and crusty and flavorful outside.

ALL-PURPOSE FLOUR, sometimes referred to as "family flour," is the type offered by millers to the grocery trade. It seeks to fill all needs satisfactorily — cakes, pies, muffins, gravies and bread. It is a medium-strong flour with about ten and one half per cent protein. Bread flour (or "Bakers' Patent") is much stronger, ranging from 11½ to 12 per cent protein, and is used by the professional baker. It is not easy to come by for the average city housewife. If home baking continues to grow, however, we may see bread flour offered to the housewife in convenient sized packages.

By the way, cake and pastry flour tests about 9 per cent protein and makes terrible bread but creates tender cakes and pie crusts.

When dealing with yeast, one must be alert and observant, because it is a living organism. It's affected by temperature, time and the kind and quantity of the ingredients around it. Under a micrscope you can watch the cells of yeast multiply with amazing rapidity. For this to take place, however, conditions must be right.

The production of yeast itself follows an incredibly complicated series of steps, including the preparation of a medium called "wort," where the pure culture of yeast is sown and grown. Compressed yeast is finally formed into the little five-eighths ounce packets designed for household use, as well as into much larger units for the baker's use.

THIS MOIST cake of compressed yeast, being perishable when subjected to temperature changes or extended storage time, has a drawback or two. The manufacturers of yeast solved these problems by finding a way to preserve it through drying. The home baker can keep the small packets of dry yeast on hand at all times with less danger of deterioration, though there is a time limit to their effectiveness. Dried yeast will keep almost indefinitely under refrigeration.

As a rule of thumb, one package of compressed yeast or one package of dry yeast is used for raising dough made from six cups of flour. If you must speed up the whole process (though the best bread is not produced this way), double the amount of yeast called for in your recipe.

If you bake often and want to buy dry yeast in bulk at a health food store, remember that one tablespoon of dry yeast equals a cake of compressed yeast or one package of dry yeast.

The function of yeast in bread is an important one. In combination with moisture and something for it to feed upon (sugar), it brings about a fermentation within the dough. The resulting gases cause the dough to rise and expand. Usually sugar in varying amounts is part of the recipe, but flour naturally contains sugar in sufficient quantity to feed the yeast for the lean, French-type bread.

DURING THE baking phase, after having performed its first task of raising the bread, the yeast is busy converting the sugars in the dough to alcohol for flavor. If you have been baking bread, you must have noticed the eye-watering, nose-jolting blast of alcohol fumes as you open the oven door when the baking is finished.

Don't forget the salt. Salt is a uniform and stable commodity available in grocery stores under all brands. Salt comes from three sources: the sea, salt lakes and natural brines and deposits in the form of rock salt. Salt from the sea or lakes is created by evaporation, while rock salt, if pure, is brought to the surface, crushed and ground. A pure salt taste characterizes the best salt, while there is a noticeably bitter aftertaste in less pure products.

Salt has a stabilizing influence which helps control the development of the yeast in doughs. If you have ever forgotten to include salt in a bread dough, you will remember the speed the dough raised. You may also have experienced the disconcerting fall it took before you could get it into pans.

If you have a gram scale and want to be quite scientific about it, the usual amount of salt proper for a simple French bread recipe is two per cent of the total flour weight. To interpret this for the home baker, I recommend one teaspoon salt to two cups of flour.
